WHEN THIS was written yesterday afternoon America was waiting eagerly for the text of President Hoover's first message to Congress.

It has been the custom of the Presidents to send messages, in confidence, to editors several days in advance of the official reading. This time not even editors knew what the President intended to say.

It was reported that the message would be short, not more than 1500 or 2000 words.

It takes concentration to write a short message. "If I had more time," Madame De Sevigne wrote to her daughter, "I should have written a shorter letter."

And Montesquieu, in the preface of his short, marvelously interesting "Spirit of Laws" asks readers to bear in mind that it took him 30 years to write it, about 16 words per day. Some entire chapters in his book have fewer than six lines.

W. C. Durant told many Americans via the radio: "The Federal Reserve Board is alone responsible for the highest interest rates ever prevailing in prosperous times."

If Mr. Hoover's problems are complicated by a widespread panic, he will know whom to thank for the panic.

First in responsibility are the millions that gamble in stocks, when they ought to be attending to business.

And second, lower, the Federal Reserve, that has encouraged usury of which the "respectable financiers" that practice it ought to be ashamed.

Interest rates that national banks may charge to anybody under any circumstances should be fixed by federal law.

Banks that earn more than 200 per cent a year should be satisfied with 100 per cent, or even less.

Lawyers, interested in expensive litigation, run our courts, and we have a shameful system of expensive, delayed justice.

Bankers interested in usurious interest rates run the Federal Reserve. And that institution, supposed to protect the country from panic, is called a menace by responsible business men.

Millions that the Government formerly collected on real beer and real whiskey now go to the American bootlegger.

Believing the London Stock Exchange Derby sweepstakes amounts to $5,000,000, the British government is advised to establish a lottery on the Derby, using the profits to relieve taxation.

Virtue protests, but the government lottery would be nearer to a fair bet than bookmakers offer. And since fools will squander hundreds of millions in gambling, perhaps the government might as well take part of it. Americans give their bookmakers $800,000,000 every year.

In Geneva, a divorced lady jealous of her husband's second wife, sent her some flowers, plus a poisonous viper hidden in the box. The snake arrived dead, fortunately, but frightened the second wife so badly that premature birth of a child resulted.

The snake sender, who confessed, said she could not bear the thought of that child.

King George gives the British Museum a Japanese tablet, on which is written a description of mortifications of the flesh inflicted upon himself by a Japanese Buddhist "that the divine powers might be moved to restore the King's health."

Once Christians believed that it pleased God to have them torture themselves by starvation and otherwise. Now they believe that the All Powerful would rather have them go to work.

The Rev. Dr. Duffield, Presbyterian, says our age is religious, the trouble is with the churches.

What is true of Christianity is doubly true of the Moslem faith. Amanullah, deposed King of Afghanistan, drew a crowd of 60,000 supporters by promising to show them the mantle of Mohammed.

It had been locked in a chest for 200 years, and Mohammedans believed that only a good man can open the chest.

After two hours of effort Amanullah suddenly opened the chest and held up the sacred relic. The people flocked to him

In Northampton, England, smallpox is spreading rapidly. Of 300 smallpox cases, 80 had been vaccinated as infants, not since; 270 had never been vaccinated. An outbreak of smallpox is a wonderful cure for anti-vaccination nonsense.

LEADERS RALLY FOR BATTLE

A "call to arms" to the people of Massachusetts to rally in opposition to the overlords of the power interests at tomorrow's hearing at the State House on the municipal light and power plant will emanate today from legislators preparing to wage war against the operations of the Power Trust in New England.

Those leading the fight to prevent Bay State consumers from being tricked into accepting a modified bill based on appeal to all citizens able to attend to be present when the hearing opens at 10:30 Wednesday morning before the Way and Means Committee.

YANKEES IN CHINA SHOT

Shanghai, April 16 (AP)—One American was dead, an American gunboat bore the scars of machine-gun fire, and another American made his way to Shanghai with a bullet hole in his hand today as Chinese internal strife flared without respect for foreign life or flags.

Belated telegrams identified an American missionary previously reported dead in southern Kweichow as Herbert K. Smith, Seventh Day Adventist of Zionville, Ind., believed killed by brigands.

The gunboat Oahu was raked with machine gunfire above Ichang, Hupeh, as it proceeded up the Yangtze river.

No one was injured and the identity of those firing at it could not be determined, both Nationalist soldiers and those of the Wuhan opposition being engaged in fighting along the banks of the river.

A young American named Marshall, working his way around the world who was wounded yesterday in the hand when Chinese fired on the British gunboat Tern near the same place, was en route to Shanghai.

Rush to Join Lindbergh Club Continues

Gee whiz!

What a popular organization the Boston Evening American Lindbergh Club has turned out to be!

You nearly took our breath away, boys and girls of New England. We have had hardly time to breathe since the club was organized. The first rush, in which 2954 New England boys and girls joined the club on the opening day, was as nothing compared to what followed.

Sea after bag of mail has been received hourly since that first rush. Thousands of letters containing membership enrollment blanks clipped from this newspaper have poured into the Boston Evening American office in every mail. Whole sacks filled with letters have been received.

Additional hundreds of children joined the club through organizations to which they belong. They came in as a body. Other boys and girls made personal visits to the Boston Evening American office to become members. Never has there been such a rush in any activity of this kind conducted by this newspaper.

The club has been a smashing hit from the start. It seems as if every boy and girl in New England wants to join, judging

BAR DEAD MAN IN LOVE SUIT

Mrs. Helen L. Eldridge, Newton society matron, won the first skirmish today in the divorce battle against her husband, Joseph I. Eldridge, Boston broker, when an attempt by his counsel to introduce the name of a dead man as a second "rival" of Eldridge, was blocked by Judge Harris.

Attorney Edward O. Proctor, counsel for Mrs. Eldridge, characterized the proposal as the most "astounding mendacity," declaring the man was not only dead, but was 60 years old, married and the father of seven children.

After reading an affidavit purporting to be the statement of a negress domestic formerly employed by Mrs. Eldridge, Judge

HURT IN FALL UNDER TRAIN

Miss Emelie De Cristasaro, 22, of Riverside ave., Medford, lost her right arm and suffered other serious injuries today when she fell from the platform of a Boston-bound train at the Park st., Medford, station of the B. & M. railroad.

Her arm was severed at the shoulder. At Lawrence Memorial hospital her name was placed on the danger list.

Several women passengers fainted as they heard the agonized screams of the girl. Station officials lifted her from under the train and sent her to the hospital in a police ambulance.

SAVE VICEROY IN DEATH PLOT

London, April 16 (AP)—Dispatches from India today indicated an attempt may have been made on the lives of Lord Irwin, viceroy of India, and Lady Irwin.

An Exchange telegraph company story said an attempt was made to wreck the train bearing the two from Delhi. A bridge was found afire and 18 cross-ties were burned. Telegraph wires in the vicinity had been cut. A Reuters dispatch said the bridge caught fire, presumably accidentally.

REBELS FREE 2 AMERICANS

Nogales, Ariz., April 16 (AP)—Two American residents of Nogales, Ariz., who were arrested in Nogales, Sonora, and held as Mexican federal spies, have been released by the rebels and sent back to the United States.

A report was circulated here last night that one of the men had been executed by a firing squad. The report became current after a detachment of soldiers was seen to draw up in formation across the international line and fire a volley of shots. The report was later proved untrue.

Agua Prieta, Sonora, Mex., April 16 (INS)—Arthur Smith, American aviator of St. Louis, Mo., escaped injury when his plane, which he is piloting for the Mexican rebels, crashed here today.

AUTO PLUNGES OFF BRIDGE

Ambulances and fire apparatus from Boston and Quincy, together with the police boat, were rushed to the Granite ave. bridge today, when a sport coupe driven by George O. Ayers of 553 High st., Randolph, went through the rail and dropped to the bank of Neponset river below.

The car was wrecked but Ayers escaped injury, requiring no help from the would-be rescuers sent to the spot in the belief that an Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway bus had gone off the bridge.

According to the police, Ayers was trailing the bus, which stopped suddenly at the crossing of the branch railroad track on Granite ave., near the bridge. Ayers swerved his car and, losing control, ploughed through the rail. The auto fell to the river bank 20 feet below.

HOOVER IN PLEA FOR FARM AID

Washington, April 16 (INS)—President Hoover made five recommendations to Congress today in his first presidential message.

In an unusually short executive message he proposed to the special session:

1—The enactment of a general farm relief measure, the basis of which would be a federal farm board with wide credit powers, and authorized to reorganize the agricultural marketing system on "more stable and economic lines."

2—Limited revision of the tariff in certain schedules, with increased powers for the tariff commission.

3—Suspension of the national origins clause of the 1924 immigration act, which becomes operative on July 1 unless Congress acts meanwhile.

4—Reapportionment of Congress, which all congresses

Bobby Smith will send a baseball whistling toward the Braves Field plate at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, and the 1929 baseball season will be under way.

Rain made it impossible to stage the opening this afternoon. The Tribal management waited until noon in the hope that the weather would clear, but it didn't, so the game and attending ceremonies were called off until tomorrow.

The Braves play the Brooklyn Dodgers to start the long 154-game grind. Before the actual skirmish gets going, there will be the customary ceremonies.

2 MEN HELD IN WILD PARTY

Allan E. Burke, 22, of Babcock st., Brookline, scion of a wealthy family, was released on bail of $500 in Roxbury court today, where he appeared to answer a charge of possession of drugs, arising out of a "whopee" party with two girls in a Boston hotel.

Francis J. Ferris, whose address is unknown to police, was committed in default of $5000 bail on the same charge when Judge Palmer was informed that he is wanted in Hartford on an extortion complaint.

G. A. R. Vets Gather Here

One hundred and seventy-five members of the sixty-third state encampment G. A. R. were present at Faneuil Hall today shaking the hands of their comrades.

The oldest commander in the State, Wm. R. Dempsey, Quartermaster of Post 4, Melrose, made his way from Melrose on crutches. He announced he was 93 years young, and refused to be assisted.

Both the veterans of the Spanish War and those of the Foreign contingents, assisted in making the G. A. R. men perfectly at home.

There are now 1417 men from this state left out of the original 20,000 who enlisted.

The youngest member present was Edwin J. Foster, 79, who is one of 11 family that has seen years of service. The encampment will come to a close Thursday with a banquet to be given in Kinsley Hall.

2 PERISH IN PATH OF BIG GALE

At least two fatalities and the loss of millions in property was the toll taken today by a fierce storm that lashed the Atlantic seaboard.

Easterly gales howling up the coast strewed New York highways with dismantled wires and fallen poles, while bulkheads in New Jersey were wrenched from their moorings, and are adrift in the angry seas.

Winthrop, Revere and Nahant felt a repetition of the blow struck along their waterfronts by the gale of Friday and occupants of houses adjoining the water prepared again to evacuate for the second time within five days.

Shipping was tied up in Massachusetts waters, in New York harbor and vessels caught in the sea lanes off the eastern coast scurried for shelter as the brunt of the gale swept down upon them.

An 80-foot flagpole in Harvard sq., felled by the high wind during the noon lunch hour, caused a near-panic among passersby and the broken trolley wires carried down by it fali halted for a time all traffic to and from the subway nearby.

As the center of the storm swept towards Boston from the New Jersey coast, the barometer fell to an ominous mark and the city and suburbs were drenched by a heavy rain long before noon.

Storm warnings were hoisted from the Carolina Capes to Eastport, Me., shortly after dawn, but by daybreak Nantucket reported a whole gale blowing at 76 miles an hour.

Fears of flood along the coast were somewhat allayed by the knowledge that the recent change in the phases of the moon indicated a drop in the full tides over those of Friday when unprecedented heights of the tidal flow inundated the entire beach sections of resorts in Bay State waters.

COOL RECEPTION FOR HOOVER MESSAGE

Washington, April 16—The first message of President Hoover won the Republican regulars, but it developed opposition from the same Democratic-Insurgent coalition that harassed Coolidge. The President's farm relief proposal drew criticism not only from the insurgent Republicans and Democrats, but it won faint praise from many of the administration Republicans from the Middle and Far West. Its reception particularly in the Senate was cold, the Senators sitting silent throughout its delivery by a reading clerk.

LEADERS IN WAR ON POWER TRUST RALLY FOR FIRST BATTLE

This will be the first skirmish and a highly important one, in the move to thwart the power groups who are using their millions to further menace the community by putting themselves in a position to influence public opinion and sway public servants through a controlled press.

There will be a public hearing next Monday on the two resolves which Representative James E.

Rep. T. F. Carroll Rep. F. T. Dalley

Hagan of Somerville and Anthony A. McNulty of Boston introduced in the House, calling for a sweeping investigation of Power Trust activities.

On the extent of the public showing at tomorrow's hearing will depend the fate of these resolves before the House and Senate joint rules committee on Monday.

Another development today was disclosure that the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston, one of the big light and power companies of America, and supposedly a powerful "independent," has an agreement to purchase 150,000,000 kilowatt hours of current annually for 20 years from the New England Power Association, which is a subsidiary of the International Paper and Power company, the dominating factor in the Massachusetts field.

Still another was a point blank demand made on Atty.-Gen. Joseph E. Warner, by State Representatives Thomas P. Carroll and Francis D. Dalley, to investigate "possible infringement" on the rights of the people.

Warner assured the legislators that he would make sure the power companies observe all the laws in their activities.

The drive to curb the power combines here was given added impetus by U. S. Senator George W. Norris' fresh broadside in which he denounced the secrecy of the Boston newspaper deal, and declared that the buying up of newspapers by the Power Trust was "to throw the cloak of God into public officials and to influence and dominate public utilities commissions, legislatures and Congress."

Walker Tells Reasons for Opposing Light Bill

With reference to the bill which gets a public hearing tomorrow, Secretary Wallace H. Walker of the Public Franchise League issued the following statement, which sets forth clearly the necessity for a big outpouring of citizens before the committee:

"The Department of Public Utilities, in its report to this General Court, recommended the enactment of a law which would free the cities and towns of Massachusetts from the requirement of buying the existing private plant before establishing a municipal lighting plant.

"The purpose of this recommended legislation is as to give to the cities and towns a real weapon for use in fighting against exorbitant lighting rates.

"Under the present law the municipalities are helpless to prevent unfair rates, as petitions to the department for rate reductions involve long and expensive hearings, and orders for such reductions are met by injunction proceedings in the federal courts, if such orders are unsatisfactory to the private company. And if the municipality no desires to furnish lighting to its citizens, it must first buy out the private plant at its fair market value, if the owners elect to sell

"By giving to a city or town the power to furnish lighting to its citizens, rate reduction would become a simple matter. Long and expensive hearings and trials would disappear. The private company would realize that the penalty of exorbitant rates would be, not merely a succession of hearings at the expense of the people as at present, but competition by the people in a heretofore monopolistic enterprise.

"An examination of the bill as reported by the Committee on Power and Light arouses grave doubts in my mind as to its efficacy to accomplish the desired result. Instead of squarely abolishing the necessity of the purchase of any part of the private plant, it lives the way open for the city or town to be required to purchase a part, or even the whole thereof.

"Instead of being threatened with effective competition by the people, the offending private companies would be enabled, under the bill as reported, to delay at least three hearings before the department and two hearings before the courts, municipalities, if the department should rule that the municipality should buy any part or whatever of the private plant.

If Threat Is Modified or Weakened It Is Useless

"Aside from the unfairness of the reproduction value as a rate base, one of the principal objections urged by our department against its adoption is its unwieldiness. Such prolonged and expensive hearings are required to determine rates under the reproduction value theory that its adoption would paralyze rate regulation in Massachusetts.

"The department therefore recommended the repeal of the requirements that a municipality purchase the private plant with the avowed purpose of simplifying rate regulation by enabling the town or city to bargain with the private company, using its threat of competition as a factor in such bargaining.

"If this threat of municipal competition is modified and weakened as provided in the bill now pending, it will not only be worthless as a threat for bargaining purposes, but will further add to the already numerous tasks of our department by opening the door to an additional multitude of hearings.

"For the above reasons I am unable to express my approval of the bill as reported. It is too much of a departure from the recommendations of the Department of Public Utilities and tends toward complication and expense of regulation rather than toward simplicity.

"I feel very strongly that the original recommendations of the Department of Public Utilities should be enacted instead of the bill as reported.

"I am driven to these conclusions somewhat reluctantly, as I realize that many of the gentlemen on the committee on power and light have worked diligently toward the enactment of legislation which will protect the interests of the public."

The pooling agreement between the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston and the New England Power Association is disclosed by the annual report of the latter just issued, which says:

"An agreement has been entered into with the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston involving the annual sale of 100,000-000 kilowatt hours for the year commencing October, 1929, and 150,-000,000 kilowatt hours annually thereafter.

"Further arrangements for pooling of power resources and exchange of power between the two systems are being worked out which it is expected will prove of great benefit to the consumers of each system."

"A third physical connection between the New England Power System and that of the Edison Company is being made. This new tie will meet the Edison System from the north, the two present ties joining from the west and south."

The New England Power Association is already under investigation by the Federal Trade Commission, which was asked last Saturday by Senator Norris of Nebraska to investigate the purchase of the Henry Ford Transit Lines by the International Paper Co., a subsidiary of the International Paper and Power Co.

The N. E. P. A. is a $100,000,000 organization which has been expanding rapidly in the past 15 months in New England, with ambitious new plants and transmission lines, which, aside from various small companies, but not withstanding its extent, it is only one of the subsidiaries of the International Paper and Power Co., a combine of three times its capitalization.

The New England Power Association has nearly doubled its net earnings in six years, aside from the profits it has helped its subsidiaries to garner.

Boston Edison President Holds Office in Trust

Net profit in 1923 amounted to $8,000,000, gross to $26,300,000; in 1928, net was $14,800,000, gross $31,-500,000. Its output of current has increased from 887,000,000 kilowatt hours in 1923 to 1,350,000,0 in 1928.

"Lines of the association," to quote the annual report, "now reach directly or through connecting companies over 2,500,000 people in 239 communities. Electric light and power sales for the year showed an increase of 26.8 per cent."

The association has a surplus of $4,800,000, practically all of which is cash on hand.

Charles L. Edgar, president of Boston Edison, is shown by the N. E. P. A. report to be chairman of the board of the association. John R. Macomber, one of the trustees selected by the International Paper Company for the control stock which it bought of the two Hub papers, is a director.

The power association controls nearly a score of generating and power distributing concerns in New England, besides one transportation company and four construction and engineering companies. It should be borne in mind that, in spite of this, it is only a subsidiary of greater forces in the power field.

"For many years our members have expressed in no uncertain terms their apprehension and concern in the unsocial, uneconomical and designing practices of the power companies here in New England," said H. A. Russell, secretary-treasurer of the Massachusetts Branch, International Union of Operating Engineers.

"Therefore, once again we place ourselves on record, not in opposition to power development, public or private, but in favor of a constructive investigation of the whole problem.

"We view with much apprehension this power problem. We feel that our Legislature may not lend itself to the problem and the public may continue its apathy while the power companies march on with their most insidious program, misleading our youth, perverting the minds of our adults, impeding our progress and denying our people the full use of nature's gifts.

"We will insist upon facts and deliberate action, fearing or favoring none, to the end that the people of Massachusetts and New England may have the fullest development of its power resources, furnishing cheap and abundant light, heat and power for its people."

As a basis for investigation he proposed a list of questions, among which are these:

"Should the public demand some further control over public service corporations? Will the expansion program of the large power companies furnish Massachusetts and New England in the most economical way? Should the activities of public service corporations be more definitely defined?"

Harris, Fort & Co. of Boston and New York, backers for the International Paper and Power Company, are participating, according to an announcement from Wall Street, in a syndicate underwriting a security offering in connection with the purchase by the Central Public Service Corporation of the gas properties of the Southeastern Power and Light Group and the Mobile Gas Company.

MUST START ON FARM RELIEF, SAYS HOOVER

since 1920 have been evading, in defiance of the Constitution.

5—Legislation providing for the decennial census of 1930.

Washington, April 16 (AP)—President Hoover, in a message of unusual brevity and directness, recommended to Congress today the creation of a federal farm board with authority and resources to remedy recurring causes of depression in the agricultural industry and a limited revision of the tariff with a reorganization of the tariff commission.

In addition, he proposed in this, his first state paper, the completion of legislation initiated at the last session for the suspension of the national origins clause of the immigration act, the taking of the 1930 census and the reapportionment of congressional representation.

BROAD POWERS

While proposing broad powers for the Federal Farm Board, the Chief Executive suggested no amount for the revolving fund to be furnished by the Treasury and proposed safeguards for the instrumentalities and activities to be created under the Relief Act.

"There should be no fee or tax imposed upon the farmer," he declared, adding that Government funds should be furnished only upon application of the farmer-owned and controlled agencies and then only when other services of credit and facilities are not available at reasonable rates.

In the matter of revision of tariff rates Mr. Hoover declared the test in the main was whether there had been a substantial slackening of activity in an industry during the last few years and a consequent decrease of employment due to insurmountable competition from goods of that industry.

The President emphasized that no discrimination against any foreign industry was involved in equalising the difference in costs of production at home and abroad and told Congress that in determining changes in the tariff account must be taken of the broad interests of the country as a whole, adding that such interests include American trade relations with other countries.

HIGHER SALARIES

In proposing a reorganization of the tariff commission, Mr. Hoover said it should be placed upon a higher basis and declared that we must at all times command men of the broadest attainments."

His argument that seven years of experience had proved the principle of flexible tariff to be practical, but that the time required for the commission makes its recommendations to the President for administration in order of duty should be made more automatic and more comprehensive, to the end that the time required for determinations by the commission be greatly shortened.

Declaring the government had "a special mandate from the recent election not only to develop our waterways and revise the agricultural tariff, but also to extend systematic relief in other directions," the chief executive said that while plenty of causes for agricultural depression could only be met by the creation of a great instrumentality with sufficient power, authority and resources to assist the farmers to meet these problems, each upon its own merits.

OUT OF POLITICS

"The creation of such an agency," he added, "would at once transfer the agricultural question from the field of political strife to the realm of economics and would result in constructive action. The administration is pledged to create an instrumentality that will investigate the causes, find sound remedies, and have the authority and resources to apply those remedies.

"The pledged purpose of such a Federal farm board is the reorganization of the marketing system on sounder and more stable and more economic lines.

To do this the board will require funds to assist in creating and sustaining farmer-owned and farmer-controlled agencies for a variety of purposes, such as the acquisition of adequate working capital to be advanced against commodities lodged for storage; necessary and prudent advances to cooperatives created and owned by farmers' marketing organizations for the purchase and orderly marketing of surpluses occasioned by climatic variations or by harvest congestion; the creation and extension and support of clearing houses, especially for perishable products, through which under producers' approval, co-operation can be established with distributors and processors to insure orderly marketing of commodities and for the elimination of many wastes in distribution; and to provide for liquidating handlers of some perishable products so as to eliminate unfair practices.

ELIMINATE WASTE

Every penny of waste between farmer and consumer that we can eliminate, whether it arises from methods of distribution or from hazard or speculation, will be a gain to both farmer and consumer.

"In addition to these special provisions in the direction of improved returns, the board should be organized to investigate every field of economic betterment for the farmer so as to furnish guidance as to need in production, to devise methods for elimination of unprofitable marginal lands and adaptation to other uses; to develop industrial by-products and to survey a score of other fields of helpfulness.

"The difficulties of agriculture cannot be cured in a day, they cannot all be cured by legislation; they cannot be cured by the federal government alone. But farmers and their organizations can be assisted to overcome these inequalities.

MAKE A START

"Every effort of this character is an experiment, and we shall find from our experience the way to further advance. We must make a start.

"With the creation of a great instrumentality of this character, of a strength and importance equal to that of those which we have created for transportations and banking, we give immediate assurance of the determined purpose of the government to meet the difficulties of which we are now aware, and to give an agency through which constructive action for the future will be assured."

Hoover Suggests Several Ways to Aid the Farmer

There being no disagreement as to the need of farm relief, the problem before us becomes one of method by which relief may be most successfully brought about. Because of the multitude of causes and because agriculture is not one industry but a score of industries, we are confronted not with a single problem but a great number of problems.

Some of the forces working to the detriment of agriculture can be greatly mitigated by improving our waterway transportation; some of them by adjustment of the tariff; some by better understanding in the methods of marketing.

D. A. R. BAN ON MRS. BAILIE 3499 TO 1

refused today by the 30th annual congress of the national society.

A resolution to refuse reinstatement was made a request in a full year before the Congress, but that the board of management in considering the case last year had heard all the testimony and was of opinion no further evidence could be offered.

Mrs. Bailie was expelled last year after she had made public statements, charging the existence of blacklists authorized, she said, by the national officers of the D. A. R., accusing certain public men and women of socialistic beliefs and advising that they be blacklisted by all daughters.

"MEDIOCRE MINDS."

Informed of the action of the congress, Mrs. Bailie issued the following statement:

"The great body of the membership show themselves content to be led by mediocre minds. Such a body is a deadly drag on true citizenship. I could have no pride or satisfaction in belonging to such an organization. Patriots shun demagoguery. They cherish a dynamic spiritual leadership found outside and not inside the D. A. R."

'NOT GUILTY' IS BELL'S PLEA

New York, April 16 (INS)—Samuel E. Bell, Baltimore oil magnate, was arraigned in homicide court today in connection with the death of Arthur Morgan Smith, wealthy Cleveland manufacturer, who died from injuries said to have been suffered in an altercation with Bell in front of one of New York's most exclusive hotels. Bell pleaded not guilty.

Bell and Smith had attended a party given by Mrs. Robert V. Schuette, Harkness oil heiress, and the argument between the two started, according to witnesses, when Smith tried to enter a taxi with Bell and Mrs. Robert L. Brown, Lexington (Ky.) society matron.

The courtroom was jammed with the social life of the city as Dr. Thomas A. Gonzis, the first witness, told of the skull fracture which caused Smith's death.

According to Dr. Gonzales, there were no bruises on the face. All questions relating to whether the autopsy revealed evidence of liquor were ruled out by Judge Joseph E. Corrigan.

BAR DEAD RIVAL IN ELDRIDGE LOVE SUIT

Harris denied the motion without prejudice.

Eldridge in his original cross-action, named Edmund F. O'Hearn, member of a prominent Brookline family, and Mrs. Eldridge, in her suit, accused her husband of misconduct with Mrs. Edna Smith of Norway st.

Mrs. Smith's name was brought out in the testimony for the first time, during the resumed cross-examination of Mrs. Eldridge by Atty. Hirsh.

CONFERENCE WITH "RIVAL"

Asked if she had seen Mrs. Smith at some time or other, the witness replied:

"Certainly I have. In Norway st., on the sidewalk, in the Touraine Hotel, where she had a conference with me, and twice in Mr. Proctor's office."

Through a misunderstanding, Atty. Hirsh asked when Mrs. Eldridge had visited Mrs. Smith in her apartment, and witness replied:

"Oh, I never entered her apartment in Norway st. In my life. I saw her in her apartment when I was on the street."

In her direct testimony Mrs. Eldridge told of watching the apartment with O'Hearn and a detective, and seeing her husband go in, the shades drawn and later seeing the woman in night attire.

Mrs. Eldridge asked for a chair and a glass of water and was taken under cross-examination by Atty. Hirsh. At his suggestion she drew a plan of Norway and St. Paul sts., designating the spot where O'Hearn's car was parked on the night of March 13 and where she said she saw her husband enter the apartment in Norway st.

The diagram was marked as a chart and offered in evidence. It was objected to by Atty. Proctor who wasked what it was for. Atty. Hirsh said he would bring that out later. The questioning of Mrs. Eldridge was resumed.

DETECTIVE ON HAND

Q.—Did you hire Mr. O'Hearn to go with you? A.—No. I called him on the phone.

Q.—Did you tell him your mission? A.—No. I asked him to come to Bay State rd. as quickly as he could.

Q.—How did you know you were going to Bay State rd.? A.—I had previously arranged it with the detective.

Q.—Who was the detective? A.—A man named Sneaton.

Q.—You knew your husband was going out that night? A.—Yes, we always discussed at the breakfast table what we were going to do in the afternoon and evening.

At this point Hirsh asked a long question and Mrs. Eldridge broke in:

"What is the joke, Mrs. Eldridge?" asked Hirsh. A.—Im not laughing. I didn't understand the question. (This was after she had described again in detail how she followed her husband from Bay State rd. to Norway st.)

Q.—Did you see your husband on March 13 from 8 o'clock to 10:15? A.—I did not.

Witness said she sat in O'Hearn's car for two hours waiting.

Q.—Of your own knowledge, do you know what your husband did for two and one quarter hours? A.—No; that I saw myself. I know what the detective told me.

MEETS HER "RIVAL"

Q. Did you see this Mrs. Edna Smith at some time or other? A. Certainly I have.

Q. And where? A. In Norway st., on the sidewalk, in the Touraine Hotel where she had a conference with me, and twice in Mr. Proctor's office.

Q. When did you go to her apartment and see her in reference to March 13? A. Oh, I never entered her apartment in Norway st., in my life. I saw her in her apartment when I was on the street.

Q. Did you ever see Edna Smith in Norway st., other than on March 13? A. No.

Q. Did you continue watching the place after March 13? A. Certainly.

Q. Who was with you? A. Fred Gamsby, who will testify today, Mr. Whipple's detective, a Mr. Jacobson, and another detective in Mr. Jacobson's employ.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Eldridge in the apartment after March 13? A. There's some doubt. I don't know.

A recess was taken at this point.

SHE QUITS HER HONEYMOON; HE'S ALONE

New Bedford, April 16—When Mrs. Edward L. Feeney, former bright light of New York's younger social set, quit her brand new author-husband's Martha's Vineyard cottage, her going was neither a "disappearance" nor a "mystery," New York police and the wife's own attorney tartly informed the lonesome Mr. Feeney today.

The Feeney marriage took place only a few weeks ago. The bride, who had been wed before, was described as wealthy and extremely popular in New York.

The honeymoon took place in Feeney's studio-cottage on the Vineyard. Feeney himself, according to his story, combined love and kisses with work on a novel which he had un der way.

Mrs. Feeney grew restless. She said she had to make a trip to New York to "help out a woman friend who was going to have her face lifted." There was an argument. Mrs. Feeney went anyhow. Feeney, after several days, tried to find her and failed. He then appealed to the police.

Capt. Ayres, chief of the Missing Persons Bureau in New York, communicated with the husband today. He said the wife was far from lost, was well, and was able to take care of herself. He withdrew from the case.

Margaret Douglas, Mrs. Feeney's attorney, declared that the young husband "permitted himself to exaggerate when he said his wife had disappeared."

Mrs. Feeney has been in New York the whole time, Miss Douglas declared.

JURY IS CHOSEN IN BARRED BOOK CASE

LEGAL BATTLE OVER DREISER NOVEL OPENS

A jury of men in various and sundry walks of life was picked today in Suffolk Superior Court to decide whether Theodore Dreiser's "An American Tragedy" tends to corrupt the morals of youth.

Donald S. Friede, publisher of the book, is charged with publishing objectionable literature. Police Lieut. Daniel J. Hines of the Boston vice squad brought the test case after Friede sold him a two-volume edition of "An American Tragedy" at police headquarters.

The defendant was represented in court today by Arthur Garfield Hayes of New York and Thomas D. Lavelle of Boston. Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick T. Doyle, with Lieut. Hines, is prosecuting the case for the government, and Judge Hayes is presiding at the trial.

Clarence Darrow, famous attorney, who has espoused the cause of Friede, was not present in court today, but it is expected that he will appear later in the case.

The jury comprises William E. Russell, clerk, foreman; William E. Bryan, janitor; Thomas F. Cronin, baker; Leo C. Finn, shipper; Thomas L. Flynn, salesman; James Karman, salesman; Michael H. Kelley, auto washer; John J. Kennaley, machinist; William J. O'Neil, clerk; Charles E. Smith, treasurer; James Templeton, painter, and Oliver S. Thompson, machinist.

Before the jury was completed the government challenged two talesmen and the defense one. A fourth man was excused by the court after admitting that he had read the book and formed an opinion.

Lieut. Hines, first witness called, testified that on April 16, 1927, he purchased two volumes of the edition from Friede for $5.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Doyle then began reading excerpts from "An American Tragedy" to the jury. He read 24 pages from the first volume in support of the government's charge that the book is "obscene, indecent and impure and manifestly tending to corrupt the morals of youth."

HELEN MORGAN GOES ON TRIAL

New York, April 15 (AP)—Helen Morgan, actress and former night club hostess, went on trial today charged with maintaining a common nuisance at the Helen Morgan summer home, where the Government alleges liquor was sold.

The charge is the same as that of which Texas Guinan, another hostess, was acquitted last week. Miss Morgan's defense is the same as Miss Guinan's, that she had no part in any infraction of the law and was merely an employe and not responsible for the acts of the management.

Before the trial began six co-defendants of Miss Morgan pleaded guilty and two others failed to appear and bench warrants were issued for them. Miss Guinan was acquitted after 10 co-defendants had pleaded guilty.

Miss Morgan quit the business after prohibition agents raided the club where she was hostess and carted away everything that could be picked up or pried loose to a storage warehouse.

HOLMES TAKES STAND TO TELL HIS STORY

Guy Willis Holmes, unfrocked New Bedford minister, took the stand in his defense in Suffolk Superior Court today against two grave charges involving Antoinette Fortin, former waitress.

He is on trial before Judge Philip O'Connell and a jury on an indictment charging him with a statutory offense on September 3, 1925, and on another indictment alleging he violated the true name law on the same date in a Boston hotel.

Holmes was preceded on the stand by the sexton of the Pleasant St. Church, New Bedford, in which he was at one time minister, who with his son, established an alibi for their former pastor on the date named in the indictments.

Chas. Rose, the sexton, testified he was in a New Bedford garage about 9:30 o'clock on the night of Sept. 3, 1925, parked his machine there and saw Holmes park his car also. This testimony was corroborated by John C. Ross, a son of the witness, who testified he accompanied his father to the garage on that night.

Elvear Marcotte, nightman at the garage, testified he saw Holmes drive his car on to the parking floor on the night of Sept. 3 and produced the garage record in his own writing to substantiate his testimony.

2 OWNERS OUST RUM TENANTS

Springfield, April 16 (AP)—Dist. Atty. C. R. Cisson said today he had received notification from the owners of two buildings here that they had served notices on club tenants to move out.

Action followed recent raids by police and federal agents which disclosed the clubs were in fact luxurious speakeasies, police said. Threats of padlock proceedings were made.

Dist. Atty. Cisson said also he was receiving from the police of Hampden and Berkshire Counties, comprising his district, lists of places that have been raided, which information will be filed for use in any padlock moves the prosecutor may initiate.

The young women, who gave the names of Miss Evelyn Allen of Ivy st. and Miss Margaret Drusereau of Pismark st., had to receive medical attention after they had accepted an invitation to eat in the room occupied by the men.

A tube of cocaine, it is charged by Sergeant Maune and Patrolmen Corbett and Blood of the Back Bay station, was found on the window sill of the room.

Dr. William O. Brown, who attended the young women, asserted that they had suffered effects of a drug.

7 Women Give No Gay Touch to Staid Congress

Washington, April 16 (AP)—Somber hues will remain the style for women in congress, judging from the dresses worn at the opening session by the seven feminine members present of eight who have seats.

Only two did not wear black. Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, Republican, Illinois, was in white, and Mrs. Mary T. Norton, Democrat, New Jersey, wore tan. Mrs. Norton and Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, Republican, Massachusetts, wore corsages of flowers. The former diminished the size of her bouquet by giving blossoms to male members.

Just as seven women participating in the House proceedings was a record, the galleries also were largely occupied by feminine visitors. These included many delegates to the congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Besides Mrs. Rogers, those in black were Mrs. Florence P. Kahn, California, and Mrs. Ruth Baker Pratt, New York, both Republicans, and Mrs. Pearl P. Oldfield, of Arkansas, and Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, of Florida, Democrats. Mrs. Katherine W. Langley, Republican, Kentucky, was prevented by illness from attending.

NORRIS TO KEEP CHAIRMANSHIP

Washington, April 16 (AP)—Republican Senate leaders are having their troubles in filling vacancies on the more important committees with plenty of rivalry among the party members. There also have been rumors of a movement to discipline Senator Norris, Republican, Nebraska, who campaigned for the Democratic presidential nominee, Alfred E. Smith.

Party leaders are giving little attention to the talk against Norris and he is expected to be returned to his chairmanship of the Judiciary committee.

The Curious Quizzer

Every day he asks a question and pictures those questioned.

THE QUESTION

Should the present law which apportions seats in the House of Representatives on a basis of total population be limited so as to apportion them on a basis of total number of citizens?

LEO J. SULLIVAN, 357 K st., South Boston—I certainly would advocate the proposed plan presented to the House by Rep. Stalker of New York. At present, aliens are represented in Washington just the same as a citizen. The seats in the House should be apportioned on the basis of citizenship in the districts. Therefore, the House will only represent American citizens and not aliens as they do now.

HELEN BUCKLEY, 14 Suffolk st., Cambridge—I believe that the present manner of representation of both citizens and aliens in Washington should continue. A great many of these aliens own real estate and pay taxes. There is no reason in my mind why they should not have some representation in Washington. The greatest part of these foreign elements come to the United States and settle for the remainder of their years and in due time and procedure they gradually become American citizens.

JOSEPH McDONOUGH, 478 East Seventh st., South Boston—Let only American citizens be represented in Washington. Many aliens come to this country and make their fortunes and then return to their native lands. At present a foreigner has just as much representation in Washington as American citizens. When they signify their intentions of becoming citizens, by taking out their citizenship papers, then they should be counted in with other citizens in electing representatives to go to Washington.

CELIA LONGO, 86 Newfield st., Plymouth—Seats in the House of Representatives should still be apportioned according to the population. Aliens are subjected to taxes the same as American citizens. So there is no reason in my mind why they should not be represented in Washington. Of course, they are not allowed to vote for the representative until they become naturalized in due course of time. If a foreigner owns a piece of property, and pays his taxes on the same, he is therefore entitled to a little consideration.

RECORD RUSH TO ENROLL IN LINDY CLUB CONTINUES

from the avalanche of mail that has greeted the Lindbergh Club editor.

And why not? Of course, every boy and girl in New England is desirous of honoring Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, their aviator-hero. Of course, every boy and girl in New England worships Colonel Lindbergh because of his courage, ability and modesty. Every boy and girl is anxious to be one of the party of 12 children who will go from New England as representatives of the Boston American Lindbergh Club to present a wedding gift to Colonel Lindbergh That is one of the aims of the club.

WATCH FOR LIST

Membership cards and buttons are now being mailed to all those who have enrolled. This work is being done by a large group of clerks and will be completed as quickly as possible. If you do not receive your membership card and button as soon as you expect, do not become perturbed. Be patient. They will reach you as soon as the large force of workers and Uncle Sam can get them to you.

Boys and girls to whom membership cards are sent must fill in their names and addresses. The cards are void unless signed by the members to whom they are sent. The names of the first children who joined this popular club will be printed in the Boston Evening American on next Friday, Patriots' Day.

One of the objectives of this club is to foster an intelligent interest in aviation among the children of New England.

The entire membership of many small organizations of boys and girls are joining the Lindbergh Club. The first whose entire membership became members of the Boston American Lindbergh Club was the Bennett Aero Club of Auburndale, consisting of eleven boys, who have been organized for more than a year.

Headed by their president, fifteen-year-old James L. Griffith, of 309 Webster st., Auburndale, the eleven boys who comprise Bennett Aero Club, trooped into the office of the Boston Evening American to join the club. They organized their club on April 10, 1928, the day on which Floyd Bennett, famous aviator, died.

PLAN MODEL MEET

Among the many useful things they are planning to do is to mark one or more buildings in Auburndale so that aviators may know they are flying over Newton. These markers will also point to an emergency landing field located at Riverside Recreation Park. E. J. Ovington, a development engineer, is advisor of the club.

Another of the proposed activities of the Bennett Aero Club is a model meet on May 30.

The other officers of the Bennett Aero Club are Edward Sargent, 270 Melrose st., Auburndale, vice-president; and Edmund Hawes, 2390 Commonwealth ave., Auburndale, treasurer.

Included among its members, all of whom joined the Boston American Lindbergh Club, are the following: Russell G. Nicholson, 24 Riverside st., Robert, Walter and Stanton Amesbury, 19 Berkely pl., Bud Fisher, 31 Sherman pl., Curtis Ovington, 19 Rowe st., Francis Holton, 22 Central st., and Stuart Stearns, 340 Wolcott st., all of Auburndale.

President Griffith of the club, as spokesman for the members of his organization, said:

"The members of the Bennett Aero Club think the objectives of the Boston American Lindbergh Club are very fine ones and so have joined it. All of us are admirers of Col. Lindbergh and also of Coundr. Richard E. Byrd of Boston, who is now exploring the South Pole region.

URGES BROADCAST

"Every one of us is anxious to win the trip to Washington to make the presentation of the gift to Col. Lindbergh and his bride. I also think it would be an excellent thing for the members of the Boston American Lindbergh Club to arrange an entertainment and broadcast it to Coundr. Byrd and the members of his party.

"There are many other things that the club could do to help aviation generally, such as advocating the arranging the marking of buildings in various cities and towns so that aviators might know just where they were when flying over any particular place.

"The members of our little club are attempting to do that in Auburndale at the present time and have already consulted the management of Norumbega Park and one or two other places with that end in view. The markers, which we intend to arrange for, will not only say 'This is Newton,' but will also have pointers indicating the direction of an emergency landing field."

New England children ranging from eight to 18 years of age, may join the Boston American Lindbergh Club. The Boston Evening American cordially invites every boy and girl in the six New England States to become members.

The club is separated into two parts, the first is known as the Junior Division, and comprises children from eight to 12 years of age inclusive, while the second, or Senior Division, consists of children ranging from 13 to 18 years of age, inclusive.

All that is necessary to become a member of this popular club is to fill out the enrollment blank which appears in today's Boston Evening American on this page. Write your name, address, street and city or town, and age PLAINLY, or better still, PRINT it, so that there will be no mistake when the membership card and button are sent to you.

Enclose ONE PENNY with your enrollment blank. Then sit back and wait until the mail man delivers your card and button to you. Nothing more is necessary to become a member of the Lindbergh Club. The PENNY you send represents your membership dues.

Every child holding a membership card may be a candidate for the trip to Washington, D. C. to which city the Boston Evening American will send a party of 12 New England boys and girls. To become a candidate for the trip to the Nation's Capital, submit a short letter, containing 50 or more words, on the subject, "What Lindy Means to Me."

The writers of these 12 letters will be given the thrill of a trip to Washington by having all their round trip expenses to Washington, as well as hotel bills while there, paid by this newspaper.

This is a club of children in the six New England States between theages of eight and 18 years formed for the purposes of interesting childre. in aviation and particularly in the supreme aviator, Col Charles A Lindbergh. The clubhas been named a ter him, not for the purpose of exploiting his name, but because he rep sents to all, whether men, women or children, those ideals to which we should aspire, nd because in him is personified courage, ability and supreme modesty.

Some members of the children s club will see Col. Lindbergh. Many of them never will, but all of them by being members of the club which bears his name will feel closer to him and should receive, and it is hoped will receive, the urge to pattern themselves after him and live up to the standards which he maintains.

Col. Lndbergh is not the creator of this lub. Although he is not a member none but children are active members) it is named for him because t the inspiration his name will bring to every child who is a member of it.

For the purpose of fostering interest among children in aviation the Boston Evening American will peri diagrams at a later date showing how to make model airplanes that will actually fly. Lectures y widely known aviators are ing arranged by this newspaper for the pleasure and education of members of the club.

Additional surprises for club members are being arranged and will be announced later. Every member of the club is urged to watch the daily announcements in the Boston Evening American after joining the club. They will keep him or her in touch with what is are planning.

'Tabor Luck' Wins $20,000 Fortune for Poor Widow

Denver, March 15 (AP)—Another manifestation of the unfailing "Tabor luck" came to the aged and penniless Mrs. H. A. W. Tabor with the filing for probate of the will of her brother, Peter McCourt, pioneer theatrical man.

Through the terms of the will Mrs. Tabor, widow of the eccentric millionaire, U. S. Senator Tabor, will receive 100 shares of stock of a wagon company. McCourt was a heavy stockholder in the company. His friends estimated the stock bequeathed to Mrs. Tabor to be worth about $20,000.

NEW BRIDE IS TAKEN BY POLICE

According to none-too-sympathetic Lynn police, Joseph E. Zimmerman, 37, Milford "Romeo, ought to take up poker. He's unlucky enough in love to be a four-way winner at cards.

Not six months ago, Zimmerman's heart was turned over to the keeping of charming Mrs. May Chauncey of Worcester, who was advertising for a husband, but missed out because Mrs. Chauncey's own husband got ahead of him.

Zimmerman then married Mrs. Mary Meagher, a widow, lately of Lynn. There was a big wedding, but too much publicity.

Policemen read the newspapers Lynn officers went to Milford and butted right into the honeymoon with a warrant for the bride. Mrs Zimmerman, it seemed, when she was Mrs. Meagher, had broken a date with a Lynn judge on a liquor selling complaint.

TORCH SLAYER ADMITS HE IS A BLUEBEARD

Elizabeth, N. J., April 16 (INS)—Henry Colin Campbell, confessed "torch slayer" of Mrs. Mildred Mowry, today tore aside the veil of his past life and admitted, authorities stated, that he was Henry C. Close, forger, embezzler, ex-convict, polygamist and modern Bluebeard.

Detectives and Bertillon experts in New York compared the fingerprints of Campbell and Close and found them to be identical.

When confronted with this startling fact today Campbell readily admitted that he was the man who disappeared from public sight in 1919 after a career of crime nation-wide in scope.

PRISON RECORD.

Close, who was the son of a New York educator, served terms in California and Sing Sing and married and lived with three wives at the same time. He vanished from sight a number of years ago.

Close was first sentenced to a five-year prison term in California for forgery, but through the influence of his father he was pardoned. He then returned East to open a health farm at Montclair, N. J., and soon married one of the nurses.

HAD MANY WIVES.

In 1899, police records show, he was married to Marie Backer, an orphan of Scranton, Pa., following the birth of a daughter, Dorothy. He had obtained a responsible position.

The disappearance of several valuable articles led to an investigation of Close's life and it was revealed there was a Mrs. Close No. 1, A Mrs. Close No. 2 and a companionate wife, known as Maude Allen. Later it was learned he had married still another woman, Mrs. May Parkinson Powers, in Pawtucket, R. I.

Suitcase Mystery Is Solved on Spot; All of 'Em Were 'Lefts'

Off duty and homeward bound today, Special Officer Thomas E. Keating of Capt. William Livingstone's flying squadron, stumbled over a suitcase in an alley off Savin Hill ave., Dorchester.

A look revealed four cases in all. Officer Keating opened them and found new shoes—all lefts.

"One more sneak thief tried to rob a salesman and got stung," Keating told headquarters by telephone.

The shoes had been stolen from Harry Baum, Washington st., Dorchester.

'THE AMATEURS' HOLD SPOTLIGHT AT WHITNEY HALL NEXT WEEK

Society Actors Give Porter Emerson Browne's "The Bad Man" on Evenings of April 24, 25 and 26

EXCURSIONS INTO THE FIELD OF THE DRAMATIC COME with a regularity immensely pleasing to "The Amateurs" clientele. Little journeys with these players of tried and true abilities are rich in promise and delightful in fulfilment—as capacity houses at Whitney Hall attest, season after season. Next in the long list of successes "The Amateurs" serve up to their faithful and fastidious public is "The Bad Man" on the evenings of April 24, 25 and 26.

IT'S FROM THE PEN OF PORTER EMERSON BROWNE AND HAS in the cast a splendid selection of the Amateurs, who are amateur only in name, not in stage technic and finesse. The cast reads thus: Gilbert Jones, David Clark; Henry Smith, Malcolm Jenney; Morgan Fell, George Walker; Lucia Fell, Miss Ruth Holmes; Red Giddings, Wallace Johnson; Jasper Hardy, Arthur H. Sawyer; Angela Hardy, Mrs. Benjamin T. Stephenson; Pancho Lopez, E. Irving Locke; Pedro, Shirley K. Race; Venustiano, Walter Webling; Bradley, Doane Arnold, and Blake, Francis Coulter.

TO THE TTRO AT TENNIS THE FACILITY WITH WHICH Miss Marjorie Morrill moves up the ladder of fame to international place with the great of the tennis world is nothing short of marvelous. Miss Morrill sailed for Europe weeks ago—with her pet racquets in perfect trim and her tennis technique at its finest. Matches all along the sun splashed Riviera courts with international stars of the tennis world found Miss Morrill adding bright new laurels to her wreath.

NOW THE CABLES SING WITH NEWS OF HER SELECTION to play on an American team, against contestants from continental countries and England. And with such starry stars as Miss Helen Wills and Miss Helen Croon as teammates, Miss Morrill's stay abroad will be indefinitely added to—what with matches to be played at The Hague in May, against France in Paris immediately afterward, later meeting Germany's bright particular hopes in Berlin and then moving to Wimbledon in June.

AFTER WIMBLEDON WITHOUT DOUBT AMERICAN COURTS will have their place in Miss Morrill's itinerary—interest in the Manchester contests on the Essex Country Club courts is never lagging. And then Longwood always has something interesting in the way of tennis to serve up on those splendid courts, where many a famous battle has been waged and honors won and lost. Miss Morrill and her mother, Mrs. Joseph Morrill, sailed together for Europe; later they are to be joined by Mr. Morrill and a younger sister.

CROSSING THE ATLANTIC ON TENNIS BENT IS BECOMING almost as commonplace as ferrying to Miss Morrill—who comes home to stay for two or three weeks and then sails away again with the joyous prospect before her of playing tennis before crowned heads and enjoying the prestige, social and official, accorded queens of sport.

MISS ROSE L. DEXTER, PATRON OF THE ARTS, THE SCIences and fine projects, and mistress of a spacious Beacon st. mansion, is ever ready to open her purse or her home when the cause is worthy. This afternoon tea is served and there is to be much discussion. Miss Hilda Smith speaks and her subject is the summer school for women workers at Bryn Mawr. Mrs. William Z. Ripley presides.

OUT FOR A MORNING STROLL

An interesting family group has Alexander Wheeler, the small son, James; Mrs. Wheeler, and the baby, Agnes. Mrs. Wheeler was Mrs. Agnes Grew. (Staff photo.)

WITH A SOUPCON OF THE OFFICIAL AND A DASH OF THE social, Mrs. Bradbury Cushing's tea at the Hotel Statler tomorrow afternoon to meet Mrs. Frank Allen will more suavely, even if informally, to its final 5 o'clock cup. Mrs. Mathew John Whittall and Mrs. George Youngman will sit behind the tea urns and dispense the steaming beverage. And the First Lady of the Commonwealth with her gracious presence will be a delightful chief guest for such an occasion.

IT IS MRS. WHITTALL WHO IS SO INTIMATELY CONCERNED with next season's big effort in the musical field—the series of Morning Musicales in the interests of the Boston School of Occupational Therapy. Mrs. Whittall, art patron and lady bountiful, is living in town this season, and so is in close touch with other members of the directing board of the musicales—that serve up to Boston's artistically inclined something in the way of a Bagby morning.

MRS. JOHN MYERS OF BEACON ST. IS DIRECTOR-IN-CHIEF OF the mornings. And her able assistants are Mesdames A. Barr Comstock, H. Parker Whittington, Edward Richardson, Joseph H. Pratt, Theodore Train Whitney, Jr., and Miss Marjorie B. Greene aside from Mrs. Whittall. His Excellency the Governor and Mrs. Allen lead off in the sponsor list, which includes Dr. and Mrs. J. Dellinger Barney, Dr. and Mrs. John W. Bartol and Mrs. Gorham Brooks.

ALSO ON THE LIST ARE: MAJ.-GEN. AND MRS. PRESTON BROWN, Mr. and Mrs. I. Tucker Burr, Miss Rose L. Dexter, Mr. and Mrs. George R. Fearing, Sr. and Mrs. A. Lincoln Filene, Miss Dorothy Forbes, Mr. and Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, Mrs. Francis C. Gray, Sir Wilfred and Lady Grenfell, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Hall, Mrs. Henry S. Hunnewell, Mr. and Mrs. James Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. James Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. Morton P. Prince, Rev. and Mrs. Henry K. Sherrill, Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, Mr. and Mrs. Eliot S. Wadsworth, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Webster, Mr. and Mrs. George Wigglesworth, Mrs. Roger Wolcott, Sr., and Mr. and Mrs. S. Huntington Wolcott.

JOHN CHARLES THOMAS OPENS THE SERIES IN THE Statler's Imperial Ballroom on December 4. Percy Grainger is the artist for January 8. - Mischa Elman delights on January 29. Rosa Ponselle is the artist for February 12, Beniamine Gigli has been obtained for February 26 and Sigrid Onegin concludes the brilliant series brilliantly on March 26. Mrs. Myers and her cohorts have this remarkable record to their credit—that at the moment subscription invitations go out there is an advance list of those who have already taken tickets for next season, running well into the hundreds. Truly Boston and other nearby centers are taking most avidly to the Musical Mornings thus provided.

MISS NAOMI HEWITT, PRESIDENT OF THE PRELUDE CLUB, is chairman of the usher committee for the concert that is to be given at Steinert Hall tomorrow evening, through the courtesy of M. Steinert & Sons, for the benefit of the biennial convention fund of the National Federation of Music Clubs, which meets in Boston in June. Assisting Miss Hewitt on her committee are: Miss Margaret Goullard, Miss Elizabeth Jack, Miss Muriel Ames, Miss Amie Sumner, Miss Margaret May, Miss Elizabeth Perkins, Miss Beatrice Banister, Miss Margaret Dwyer, Miss Muriel Thomas and Miss Elizabeth Schultz. Among the Boston artists taking part on the program are Miss Gertrude Ehrhart, soprado, and Miss Julia Amolsky, pianist.

Mrs. Bird Urges Freedom For Women's Political Clubs

CHARGING the Massachusetts State committee of the Republican party with attempting to form a "kind of women's Tammany Hall" by trying to organize and command clubs for political education exclusively for women, Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird scathingly denounced this policy. She spoke before 500 members of the Women's Republican Club of Massachusetts, Hon. William M. Butler and other party leaders at a luncheon given in her honor as founder of the club, held at the Copley-Plaza Hotel.

"I cannot see that it is the proper business of the State committee to organize and command clubs for political education exclusively for women," Mrs. Bird said, after the assembly had paid loving and respectful tribute to her. Mrs. Franklin W. Hobbs, president, presided at this "Founders' luncheon."

Mrs. Chas. Sumner Bird —(Bachrach Photo)

"I feel that there is danger ahead for disharmony and unavoidable restrictions," she continued, "work entirely unnecessary, an expense not warranted by the State committee and if persisted in, as at present, with the threat that clubs affiliated with other clubs must lose their Republican name, and that they must have one of the committee on their executive board, they are forming what may be a kind of women's Tammany Hall, it seems to me.

"The State committee has a task before it to make good the 400,000 or more votes lost the last year; to find how and why we can elect our governor, our congressmen and legislators, but not our senator or President. Surely its members have enough to do to make good all that is expected of them and for which their money is raised.

"If they undertake the management of political-educational clubs, I can see trouble ahead. Certainly if the women's division of the State committee is to own and direct women's clubs it would be wise for the men's divisions to own and direct men's clubs to keep a balance.

"A word to the wise is sufficient."

Mrs. Bird insisted that if the State committee allows one club to keep a desk and secretary in their rooms it must allow other clubs the same privileges and pointed out that this will result in complications.

"Let us give cheerful heed and find some way by which we can all—men's and women's political clubs and political education alike—work together in understanding and harmony. I have spoken plainly what I feel. Let us hold no one's ideas sacred, not even our own."

Bishop Slattery, Mayor and Mrs. Nichols, Mrs. Frank G. Allen, Mrs. William M. Butler, Hon. William Youngman and Mrs. Youngman, Hon. Channing Cox and Mrs. Cox, and Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller were among the honor guests. Others were Dr. Samuel W. Stratton, M. I. T.; Dr. Ada L. Comstock, president of Radcliffe; Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, Mrs. Arthur Devins Potter, Dr. Daniel Marsh, B. U.; Mrs. Roger Wolcott, Mrs. Charles R. Masury, Mrs. Barrett Wendell, Mrs. George W. Perkins, Mrs. William Lowell Putnam, Mrs. Gerald A. Bramwell, Mrs. True Worthy White, Mrs. Lenna Lowe Yost of West Virginia, Miss Frances Curtis and Mrs. Paul Fitzsimmons, Newport, R. I.

GIRL SCOUT OFFICERS

Mrs. Edwin L. Pride, clerk of the Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs, was elected commissioner of the Girl Scouts of Metropolitan Boston, at their annual meeting at the Hotel Statler. Mrs. Charles B. Mosely of Needham, retiring commissioner, presided.

Deputy commissioners elected were: Mrs. Curtis Waterman, Arlington, and Mrs. Harry M. Lowd of Swampscott. Mrs. Ernest R. Brackett was re-elected secretary and Mrs. Fritz W. Gay of Malden, treasurer.

In this division there are 7534 Girl Scouts in 287 troops with 439 adult leaders.

WOMAN'S CHARITY CLUB

More than $10,000 was raised by the Woman's Charity Club during the past year, it was reported by Mrs. Charles S. Clifford, president, at the 41st birthday breakfast of this club at the Hotel Somerset.

"How it would please the founder, our late beloved Julia K. Dyer, if she could visit us today and find the Massachusetts Women's Hospital, which we own and maintain, still serving suffering womanhood as she originally intended but on a larger scale," Mrs. Clifford said, addressing 300 members and guests.

"The homelike atmosphere has robbed surgery of its dread, a new wing has been added through the untiring efforts of Mrs. Elizabeth W. Otis, we are approved by the American College of Surgeons, and our $90,000 mortgage has been reduced by $10,000 this year."

The cash value of service rendered free during the past year was $1247, she further stated. Thus the club perpetuates the ideals of its founder, whose object was to bring back to health needy, unfortunate women.

Recently this club dedicated a new nurses home, named Richardson Hall after the donor of the building fund, Mrs. T. H. Richardson. The Junior Charity Club gave money to furnish a room in this new home.

Hon. Frederick H. Cook, secretary of State, representing Governor Allen, and Mayor Nichols each lauded the splendid achievements of this club. A splendid musical program was rendered.

Wedding Gifts of Silver

THIS tea service is a splendid example of Georg Jensen's work. It illustrates that remarkable feeling of design and craftsmanship which makes his creations so outstanding. It is fully as fine as his pieces which have been purchased by the important museums all over the world for their collections.

This tea set would be an exquisite gift for a bride. She would have a masterpiece wrought in silver by an artist whose fame will endure. It may be seen on our second floor with other suggestions of silver for wedding gifts.

In choosing silver you have a wide latitude in price without sacrificing anything in quality of design or workmanship. The tiniest salt spoon is as carefully planned for proportion and decoration as the tea sets and the coffee services.

147 Tremont Street Boston, Massachusetts

When John Adams Was President a Boston Young Man Went Into the Jewelry Business

In 1800, when Boston was a busy town of 18,000 people a far-sighted young man started a small store on what was then known as Marlborough Street (later renamed Washington Street in honor of George Washington). This new store was near what is now called the Old State House, a very desirable location in the heart of the fashionable shopping district. The young man sold snuff boxes, walking sticks, watches and gorgeous precious waistcoat buttons to the dandies and belles of the time.

This small store, started one hundred and twenty-nine years ago, was the foundation of the firm of Shreve, Crump & Low Co. The location of the business has been changed several times to keep pace with the changes in the fashionable shopping districts. In 1850 the store was established at the corner of Washington and Summer streets.

In a magazine of that date, "Gleason's Pictorial Drawing-Room Companion," it was described as "one of the most superb establishments of the kind in this country, if not in the world. For brilliancy and richness of display a view of this gorgeous mercantile palace will sink into insignificance any description of Oriental enchantment that could be conceived. When illuminated by gaslight in the evening, the store may be said to be one of the curiosities of the city, presenting an appearance that would beggar description in richness and intrinsic splendor."

In 1894 the golden eagle which had stood guard on the corner of Washington and Summer Streets for over forty years was brought to its present location, 147 Tremont Street.

As a visitor goes through the different departments he realizes that one hundred and twenty-nine years of continuously serving the public has given a splendid background of experience in catering to the people of today. Nothing cheap or tawdry can be seen. Only the finest merchandise is on display, merchandise skillfully selected from all the leading markets of the world. The new designs and styles which are offered continue to be pleasing after the novelty has worn off.

The diamond department faces the Tremont Street door. To this department comes romance every day, for the diamond continues to be the favored stone for the engagement ring. Each ring is a symbol of happiness and may well be called the foundation stone of a future home. The young man wants a ring worthy of the girl. The young girl wants a ring as radiant as her happiness. They both appreciate the satisfaction and protection of choosing a ring from a concern which knows diamonds so thoroughly.

After the engagement ring comes the wedding ring. Some people still prefer a gold wedding ring but platinum is the more popular. The latter is called the "metal of heaven," so that there is a good omen for future happiness in choosing it.

The keeper and monitor of our days, the watch, is now a thing of beauty as well as a timekeeper. Examples of the craftsmanship of the finest watchmakers of the world are offered in the watch department. From plain cases for sport wear to diamond mounted cases of small exquisite beauty, there is a watch for every occasion and every taste.

The reason for great popularity of real semi-precious jewelry is shown in the blaze of glorious color that greets the eye as it feasts on the lapis lazuli, opal, carnelian, jade, amethyst and coral mounted in rings, bracelets, necklaces and earrings in the department featuring genuine semi-precious stones.

The stationery department again recalls thought of the bride for wedding invitations from Shreve, Crump & Low Co., are exquisitely engraved on the correct kind of paper. Handbags and purses offered nearby are fashioned of the newest leathers in the smartest colors.

Since the spring and early summer weddings are so much in the foreground, the next department that the friendly observer notes brings to mind wedding presents.

The second floor is entirely given over to silver. Forks, spoons, knives, candlesticks, tea services, coffee sets, vases, plates of all kinds, salts and peppers, bowls—everything in silver that pleases the eye and tempts the pocketbook.

On the third floor, one is transported to the days when the business was founded and before that. Here is found old furniture, china, glass and silver.

On the floor above are lamps. Every period of furniture, and every color scheme is provided for. Every possible kind of lamp is thought of, for table, desk, mantel and floor.

ORIENTAL RUGS

The Ancient East has never been able to attain to American standards of business conduct.

Every Oriental Rug has a different price for each customer in those strange countries half-way 'round the world.

Skillful buying, backed by years of experience, is the buyers' only safeguard. Unfortunately this lack of commercial candor is apt to appear even in America in retail Oriental Rug trade.

Your safeguard is to deal only with houses of established reputation and integrity.

As the Oldest Rug House in America we realize gladly that a century-old reputation is at stake with every Oriental Rug we sell.

It is well, too, to remember that quality is not necessarily associated with high prices.

The buying connections established during our 112 years of business, the skill patiently acquired, the knowledge of which we have obtained mastery, all help in making it easy for Pray to keep prices low.

Pray is a specialty house. There are no costly departments to be maintained at the expense of others. There is no waste space.

Prudent buyers for over a century have found that both on the basis of quality and price, it pays to trade at Pray's.

One of a pair of rare, old, Adam Satinwood Tables Date about 1780

MY NEW galleries give opportunity to set up a proper background for such fine pieces of old furniture as the noteworthy group of satinwood now on display.

Furniture made of this wood was produced at the very height of England's Golden Age of cabinet-making, when living conditions were highly sophisticated and when there was an appreciation of fine things.

Satinwood is much in favor now, both because of the beautiful quality of the wood and the connotation of elegance which these old pieces have.

A visit to my galleries will reveal many other fine old things, and the prices will be found no higher because of the better surroundings.

SHARKEY SHOWS BOXERS HIT BY INCOME TAX

The Federal Income tax takes little heed of the circumstances of those earners whose earners, while brilliant, are often extremely brief.

The professional athlete, who spends many years training and whose physical prowess comes within a limited compass, finds the burden of the Federal Income tax a great one. Particularly is this true of the boxing ring, says Jack Sharkey, Boston's heavyweight championship claimant.

Sharkey today brings to light for readers of the Boston American a new angle in the present campaign for a reduction in tax against earned income. The boxer points out that in following the fight game, a man frequently incapacitates himself completely in the few fighting years for any work of career to follow.

At the end of his brief fighting career he is often physically and temperamentally unfit for any gainful occupation. This is the time when the tax toll hangs heavy upon him and his dependents.

SOVIET ENVOY APPEALS FOR ARMS CUT

Geneva, April 16 (AP)—Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet vice-commissar for foreign affairs, renewed his appeal for extensive world-wide partial disarmament in a dramatic speech before the preparatory commission on disarmament of the League of Nations today.

He argued that rejection of the Soviet scheme meant a dashing of peoples' hops for reduction of armament burdens.

He expressed disapproval of "repeated attempts of certain statesmen to minimize the importance of the Kellogg pact renouncing war and said he feared the attempts to minimize the pact were made with a view to creating extenuating circumstances for possible infringements or to weaken its importance as a starting point for a demand for disarmament.

Man 400,000 Years Old

New Haven, April 16 (AP)—If the earth was 24 hours old, as Dr. James Young Simpson puts it, man would be but 11 seconds old. His age is now 60,000 years. Dr. Simpson, professor of natural science at New College, Edinburgh, is visiting Yale.

ALLIES DEMAND TOO MUCH, SAY GERMANS

Paris, April 16 (AP)—Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, German reparations expert, told the reparations commission today that the allied reparations annuities proposed on Saturday exceeded Germany's capacity to pay.

Today's session opened with the distribution of figures showing how the creditor nations had arrived at the proposed annuities. This table was requested yesterday by Schacht.

Now begins the period of real bargaining which will probably result in more or less whittling down of annuities.

There was less expectation in German circles as to the failure of the conference because unless the experts agree the Allies will fall back on the Dawes plan which requires greater effort from the Reich than any new agreement likely to be adopted.

Held in High Bail on Holdup Charge

Raymond L. Doyle of Mattapan, alleged to be one of the three young men who robbed a store manager in Hyde Park, is being held at the Charles st. jail in bonds of $5000 pending a further investigation in West Roxbury District court on April 26. Doyle waived examination before Judge J. Albert Brackett in the court.

The police say that Doyle and two others entered the Economy store at 787 Winter st., Hyde Park, and at the point of revolvers robbed George Killeen, the manager, and Harold Steele, his assistant, both of Hyde Park, of $70.

MORE CARS WILL BE DRAINED AND REFILLED WITH SOCONY PARABASE MOTOR OIL THAN WITH ANY OTHER KIND

WITHOUT any trimmings, here are the reasons why we recommend that you have your oil changed and your crankcase refilled with Socony Parabase Motor Oil. It is the correct time to do the job. Your car needs the right grade for Spring and Summer driving.

Socony Parabase Motor Oil is made only from paraffin crudes—particularly suitable for motor lubrication. And that is what makes it different. It's a difference you can hear. A difference your motor can feel. All motor oils are not so made.

Go to any Socony Station. Have the man flush out your crankcase and refill with Socony Parabase Motor Oil. • • More New York and New England motorists are choosing this oil than any other brand. And they are reaping the benefit.

HOOVER HEADS THE U. S. FLAG ASSOCIATION

President Hoover accepted service as honorary president general of the United States Flag Association, it was announced today by Col. James A. Moss, president-general of the association.

President Hoover succeeds former President Coolidge in this position. The United States Flag Association is the only society, purely patriotic in character, that has the distinction of being headed by the President of the United States as president-general.

In accepting the post, the President wrote to Col. Moss as follows: "I am glad to accept service as the honorary head of the United States Flag Association. Its purpose, to spread understanding of American ideals and institutions symbolized by the flag, is a purpose that should animate all citizens."

The United States Flag Association is the organization conducting the first annual nation-wide Flag Contest, which is being sponsored throughout the country by the Hearst newspapers. The association was formed in 1924 by Col Moss, a graduate of West Point, but now retired, as an expression of his gratitude to the United States for having given him an education and for having permitted him to serve in the military forces of his government for some 32 years.

Answers to U. S. Flag Queries

The second installment of the official answers to questions used in the first annual Flag Contest conducted by the United States Flag Association and sponsored by the Hearst newspapers are printed today. Clip them out and save them. No reprints will be available.

(The numbers in parentheses following the questions refer to the pages in "The American Flag: Its Glory and Grandeur," from which the answers were gotten.)

11—The various flags with their striped designs, including the flag of St. George's Cross and the British "Union Jack," and especially the early Dutch flags, with which the Colonists had been familiar for over a 100 years. (21-22)

12—If there were seven white stripes, then the outside stripes would be white, which at a distance would not be visible—so, in order to include, to encompass the Flag, thereby better defining it, especially at a distance, the outside stripes are red, which necessitated having seven red stripes. (22)

13—A new constellation. (6)

14—"If anyone attempts to haul down the American Flag, shoot him on the spot." (5)

15—Fifteen; arranged staggered fashion. (7-8)

16—Ft. McHenry, Maryland; the night of September 13-14, 1814; in the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C. (7-8)

17—The following laws:

(1) The Act of Congress of February 20, 1905, providing that a trademark cannot be registered which consists of or comprises amongst other things, "the Flag, coat of arms, or other insignia of the United States, or any simulation thereof."

(2) A joint resolution of Congress approved may 8, 1914, enjoining the display of the Flag on Mothers' Day.

(3) The act of February 8, 1917, providing certain penalties for the desecration, mutilation, or improper use of the Flag, within the District of Columbia.

(4) The act of May 16, 1918, providing, when the United States is at war, for the dismissal from the service of any employe or official of the United States Government who criticise in an abusive or violent manner the Flag of the United States (5a).

18—By Flag laws enacted by the States of the Union. (5b.)

19—(Note) For the answer to this question, which differs according to the States of the contestants, see pages 59-64, in "The American Flag: Its Glory and Grandeur." In this connection it may be remarked:

(1) In the case of Alabama and Texas, in addition to the penalty given in "The American Flag: Its Glory and Grandeur," the offender shall also forfeit $50 to be recovered with costs in a civil action.

(2) Through inadvertence the penalty for violation of the Flag law of Colorado, which is as follows; was omitted from "The American Flag: Its Glory and Grandeur."

Colorado—Fine not exceeding $100, or imprisonment for not more than thirty days, or both; and the offender shall also forfeit a penalty of $50 to be recovered with costs in a civil action. (State flag, merchandise).

20—It is the duty of every patriotic American to report promptly all violations of Flag laws. Violations should be reported to the nearest policeman, sheriff, constable, or prosecuting attorney, depending upon circumstances. (11f).

Additional answers will be printed in tomorrow's editions of the Boston Evening American.

PARADOXES OF DRY LAW CITED BY PROFESSOR

Prof. Joseph T. Griffin, principal of Public School No. 114, Oak and James sts., Manhattan, writes to the Hearst $25,000 temperance prize contest on some of the paradoxes of prohibition. These, Professor Griffin says, were inspired by the remarks of a professor from the University of Leipsig on the occasion of a recent visit to the United States. The German educator's views were set down by Professor Griffin as follows:

By PROF. JOSEPH T. GRIFFIN

There are 19 amendments to the United States Constitution, but the one before the last appears to be the only one that Americans are much exercised about.

Although in every national election previous to 1920 the prohibitionists were overwhelmingly defeated—they have succeeded in enacting the most drastic prohibition law the world has ever known, except perhaps that prevailing in the enlightened Turkish empire.

Americans are committed to the idea that temperance should be observed in all things except in prohibition.

PECULIAR NATION

American legislators have a peculiar back-handed notion that the only way to prevent obnoxious legislation is to legislate obnoxiously. The most drastic features of the Volstead act were incorporated in the law, not by the friends, but by the foes of temperance.

Lincoln once used the phrase—"Government of the people, by the people, and for the people." The organized "super-government" has rewritten this to read: "Government of the lobby, by the lobby, and for the lobby."

Americans cajole themselves into believing that the prohibition law may soon be amended. They seem blind to the fact that a small but highly paid organization holds the key to the door of the cupboard in which their personal liberties, morals and ethics are confined.

REQUIRES REVOLT

The most sacred and important legislation in America is enacted in such a way that succeeding Congresses may easily repeal or change ineffective laws. But their law against drinking was calculated to require nothing less than a patriotic uprising to abrogate it.

A bill providing for a national department of education is hanging fire in the American Legislature because its opponents fear it may restrict the powers of states in the education of its citizens. How strange this is from a nation that prevents the states from exercising their police powers with respect to the drinking habits of citizens.

Americans appear anxious to Americanize the foreigner, yet if he drinks the innocuous drink of his forefathers they try hard to put him in jail.

LEADERS FAVOR INDEPENDENT DRUG DRIVE

By KENNETH CLARK

Washington, April 16—The Porter bill to reorganize and consolidate federal narcotic enforcement agencies under a separate bureau was endorsed by leaders of the 71st Congress, which convened yesterday in special session.

Representative Porter (R) of Pennsylvania plans to introduce the measure later in the week. Porter yesterday reintroduced ..is resolution calling upon the world powers to prevent overproduction of drugs.

In another attack on the dope evil, LaGuardia (R) of New York resubmitted his resolution calling for a joint congressional investigation of the drug problem with a view to enacting more drastic control legislation. The inquiry would be conducted by a committee of three representatives and two senators.

At the last session the Senate unanimously adopted the resolution, but the House failed to act. A fund of $50,000 would be authorized for the work.

"Before any comprehensive narcotic legislation can be passed, it is necessary for Congress to dissect the drug problem, to determine the extent of dope addiction, to expose the flagrant abuses arising under present laws, and, through a scientific survey, to find what remedies must be applied," said LaGuardia.

"I favor an independent federal narcotics bureau under aggressive leadership, and I think Congress should go into this subject thoroughly in order that no mistake will be made in passing legislation."

"Enforcement of the narcotic and prohibition laws should be separated," declared Porter. "The Harrison anti-drug law is an internal revenue measure. Therefore, to avoid any complications the narcotics bureau should remain under the Treasury. As an independent agency, the narcotics bureau would be able to make a real drive against the dope traffic."

Representative Black (D) of New York also supported this view. "The records show that the government has spent between $250,000,000 and $300,000,000 to enforce prohibition," said Black. "During the same period we have spent but $5,000,000 for narcotics enforcement.

"Crime caused by drug addicts is estimated at $1,000,000,000 yearly. Yet, in fighting the horrible menace of dope we have expended a sum 275 times less than poured into the effort to enforce prohibition. Narcotics enforcement must be under a vigorous, responsible bureau if the government is to cope successfully with the drug problem.

'Human Adding Machine' Counted Out by Death

Peoria, Ill., April 16 (AP)—William Strong, the man who could compute figures with the speed of an adding machine—and never knew how he did it—is dead.

He would stand beside a railroad track as a long freight rolled by, observing the car numbers, and when the caboose flashed past he would announce the total as correctly as the tabulator with paper and pad who stood beside him.

Merchants employed him at inventory times, in place of using adding machines. He would tell engineers how many bricks would be needed for a wall; compute cube root; give exact ages the instant a birth date was given him. Always to the question, "How do you do it?" he would answer, "I do not know."

Strong was 50 years old.

Washington, April 16 (INS)—Chances of Harry F. Sinclair millionaire oil magnate, to escape serving 90 days in jail for contempt of the Senate are considered slim by Justice Hitz, District Supreme Court, who sentenced him and fined him $500.

VANISHING MEN

A SIX-DAY STORY

by G. McLEOD WINSOR

Six-Day Novel by a Famous Author

A London jeweler named Arnold is visited by a caller named Osborn. Arnold late vanishes. Inspector Gilmour of Scotland Yard finds Arnold's safe rifled of jewels and containing only some sheets of lead. He realizes that Arnold could not have gotten away without being seen. He sends a man into the country on a clue, and the man mysteriously vanishes. Gilmour seems to be up against a new kind of master criminal. Meanwhile Seymour, a boyhood friend of Sir Henry Fordyce, comes back from India and settles at Chennel, his place near Fordyce's. The latter finds his old friend changed. He is now a keen scientist and builds a laboratory for research work. Seymour shows Fordyce an account for an amazing airplane crash.

CHAPTER 2

THE first report of the aeroplane collision came from a pilot flying the same course as the wrecked machines (London to Paris) on the following morning. As no more snow had fallen after the crash the wrecked planes formed a conspicuous patch on the white surface of the Downs.

The police noted that while one of the planes still contained the bodies of pilot and passengers, there were no bodies in or near the other plane, nor any tracks leading away from the spot. At the same time it was evident that the collision had taken place after the snow had fallen.

Inspector Gilmour was at once put in charge. Seeing that here was another coup by the criminal who had caused the other mysterious disappearances, he threw himself into the problem with the utmost eagerness.

Gilmour learned that a passenger in one plane was a Maharajah, who habitually carried a large amount of jewelry with him, and was known to have done so on this occasion.

The first thing Gilmour did was to make sure that there was no jewel case to be found, nor any jewels of value on the person either of the Maharajah or the pilot. The broken planes had his next attention. It was evident that they had interlocked in the air, and that they must have fallen together from a considerable height.

Suddenly an idea occurred to him. Suppose a pilot WANTED to bring about a collision. Was it possible to fly to a point which would make a collision inevitable and then, before the actual collision, jump with a parachute? Not the slightest indication of a descent by parachute could be found. Moreover the disappearance of the jewels seemed to disprove the parachute theory, for, in order to have stolen them there must have been personal contact.

He learned from the London aerodrome that a gentleman had called the previous day and asked for an aeroplane to take him to Paris. He had given his name as Owen Neville. Then, without prompting, came the detail that the inspector had anticipated hearing. Describing the passenger the manager of the aerodrome said, "He was a well dressed and gentlemanly man with moustache and pointed beard, slightly over medium height, well protected in a fur lined coat. He had a good sized valise and moved very deliberately. In fact, he had a rather peculiar walk, like that of a lame man, and yet not quite."

For once Inspector Gilmour spoke involuntarily.

"The same, by God!" he said.

The mystery of the pilot did not last long. He was found that morning in Kent, many miles from the scene of the crash, in the corner of a field, near a farmstead.

But his story threw little light on the affair. He remembered feeling a blow on his head, but nothing thereafter till he came to himself in the field. Evidently his passenger had crept up behind and stunned him, and taken control.

I shared the popular excitement, and Seymour too admitted that the problem was fascinating.

"The mystery seemed to be of the kind known as "scientific." A

WIFE SLAYER TO BE SENT TO STATE HOSPITAL

Leviathan Passengers Carry Their Own on Trip Across

MENTALLY UNFIT, SAY ALIENISTS

Wallace Allan Graham of Quincy, ex-naval petty officer who, police charge, shot and killed his wife, Janet, last September because he thought her disloyal, may not be tried for the crime.

He was arraigned today before Judge Nelson P. Brown in Dedham Superior Court on the indictment warrant charging first degree murder. He appeared indifferent when called upon to plead and gazed in a dazed manner around the courtroom.

Judge Brown ordered a plea of not guilty to be entered and then committed Graham to the Bridgewater State Hospital for further observation, after Dist. Atty. Winfield M. Wilbar explained that alienists had examined Graham and reported him mentally unfit for trial.

TWO SAW GIRL THROWN ON RAILWAY

Pawtucket, R. I., April 16—Florence Weybrick, 15-year-old schoolgirl, did not dash away alone to commit suicide, but was helped, half-carried by a man and a woman to the railroad track where her life was crushed out by a passing train, Rhode Island State authorities said today they had reason to believe.

Two witnesses will testify to having seen a girl of Florence's description so escorted to the tracks, Asst. Atty.-Gen. Hellen asserted. He said that he expects to show that the young woman being dragged along was either unconscious or so nearly so as to be helpless.

Rep. Thomas P. McCoy, Democratic floor leader of the Rhode Island House, was today prepared to bring before the State Legislature a resolution demanding a probe by the attorney-general into the alleged laxness of local police departments in the Weybrick case to date.

The domestic help problem is solved by taking a kitchenette apartment and the best are advertised daily in the For Rent columns.

WELLESLEY DOES WELL

"CHOSEN AS "TYPICAL AMERICAN"

Miss Mary A. Gilmore, senior at Wellesley, has been chosen by the home town folks at Rochester, N. Y., as the typical American girl from that section. She will compete with "typicals" from other sections of the country at New York. (International Newsreel photo.)

LINER WILL SELL BOOZE ON RETURN

Cherbourg, France April 16—The giant liner Leviathan reached Cherbourg today with every one of its bottles of medicine, whiskey and brandy unopened.

Passengers carried their own.

The trip from New York was officially dry, but ship's officers said the return trip would be wet, with a quantity of liquor taken along sufficient to meet the needs of passengers. What was left over, above the usual medicinal supply, was to be dumped overboard just before reaching the 12-mile limit, however.

Passengers said the trip over had been "dry"—that is as dry as trips aboard American ships ever are, with no unusual amount of liquor in evidence.

The officers professed to know nothing of the policy of the new owner of the vessel for its other outward-bound voyages. They said their orders were limited to the westbound trip and were contained in a radiogram from Joseph Sheedy, executive vice-president of the United States Lines, Inc., the new owners, to Capt. H. A. Cunningham, master of the vessel.

ATTACKS 2 GIRLS; PAYS $215 FINE

Springfield, April 16—A torn dress and necklace were among the exhibits in District Court today at the appearance of Vincent Keenan, 32, of Newbury st., Boston, charged with assault and battery on two Springfield girls on April 8.

On this complaint, and on additional charges of drunken driving, operating after his license had been revoked and drunkenness, Keenan was found guilty and paid a total of $215 in fines.

According to testimony of police officers the Boston man attempted to drag Miss Mary Connors, 20, of this city into his parked machine on Bancroft st. The police declared she fought him off and her dress was torn and necklace broken in the scuffle.

Further testimony charged Keenan with a similar attack on Miss Elizabeth Delano, who was walking on Main st. with her father. The father held Keenan until two police officers arrived and placed him under arrest.

Railway Asks for Tax Abatement

Concord, N. H., April 16—Whether the recent decision of the Supreme Court on tax exemptions also precludes exemption of street railways under a state law permitting such exemptions when a carrier has failed to earn its operating expenses and fixed charges in addition to taxes for the previous year, arose when a petition for such tax abatement was heard before the public service commission. The petitioner was the Manchester & Nashua Street Railway.

Tourists to France Must Be Vaccinated

London, April 16 (AP)—The Southern Railway has entered negotiations with the French ambassador in an effort to postpone or modify a drastic French health order effective tomorrow whereby all mailboat passengers from England must produce documentary evidence showing that they were vaccinated against smallpox within the last two months. Passengers who have not been vaccinated will be refused landing.

Sea Safety Parley

London, April 16 (AP)—Delegates of more than a dozen countries assembled at the Foreign Office today for the first meeting of the international conference on the safety of life at sea.

Two Americans Held in Madrid

Paris, April 16 (AP)—A dispatch from Hendaye on the Franco-Spanish frontier to the Paris edition of the New York Herald today said an American man and woman had been arrested in Madrid charged with having criticized the government.

The man is William Wright, 19, of Washington, an employe of the American commission to the international exposition at Seville and the woman is the wife of a Spaniard named Bonillo.

The American embassy took steps to secure the release of Wright. Senora Bonillo, having married a Spaniard, was assumed to have surrendered her nationality.

Seek More Light on Reparations

Paris April 16—The reparations experts reassembled today for further discussion of the long pending reparations problem. Instead of rejecting the figures presented by the allied creditors on Saturday, as had been predicted, Dr. Hjalmar Schact, chief German delegate, expressed a desire for more light on some points.

Youth Arrested in Stolen Auto

Lawrence Barrett, 18, of 94 West Brookline st., South End, who is said by the police to have served a term at Shirley, was arrested at Dover and Washington sts., in an automobile which he is alleged to have stolen from in front of the National Theater, South End. The machine was left there by its owner, John Duseappi, of 4 Robbins st., Brookline.

Two in Quest of District Court Post

Westfield, April 16—Indecision on the part of Atty. J. Fred Buschmann as to whether or not to be a candidate for reappointment as clerk of the district court here, has led Theodore C. Couse, assistant clerk, and John J. Guinasso, sealer of weights and measures, to start an active campaign for the position.

Speculative Fever Abates; Industry Moving Briskly

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, April 16—Stock speculation, after having caused alarm in high financial and political circles, has abated sharply and substantially. Quotations have declined moderately, but not drastically, since the Federal Reserve Board made its last and most emphatic warning against continued expansion of brokers' borrowings.

Industry and business have started the second quarter of the year encouragingly, but not uniformly.

B. C. Forbes

Monetary tension has relaxed at least a little. As high as 9 per cent is still paid for time loans, revealing a wholly abnormal condition; but there has been no repetition of 20 per cent call rates, or of the nervous strain effected at the end of the week at 9 per cent, with final quotations dropping to 7 per cent.

The release of "earmarked" gold in New York, the week's reduction of $135,000,000 in brokers' loans and other changes have resulted in raising the Federal Reserve System's reserve ratio to almost 74 per cent, against 71½ per cent a week earlier and a month ago, while the New York Reserve Bank's percentage is 82, contrasted with 76 per cent two months ago.

Under these circumstances, talk of possible advances in rediscount rates has subsided. The Governor of the Federal Reserve Board having gone on a month's trip via the Panama Canal, to the far West, it is hardly likely that Washington will take any drastic action at this time.

All this improved the stock market sentiment in the second half of the week. After rather pronounced weakness on Monday and Tuesday, a moderate recovery set in and continued throughout the week, resulting in a net average gain of two points for the week. The level, however, still is 10 points below the year's peak.

The decline in prices is less significant than the decline in volume speculation. There has not been another eight-million-share day or even any more six-million-share days. The speculative fever which raged throughout the length and breadth of the land has cooled since the market demonstrated forcefully that it can fall as well as rise.

The writer continues to feel that the best interests of the nation call for discouraging the unprecedented speculative mania and allowing declines in securities to return to normal. The Federal Reserve Board may have transcended its authority and attempted to exercise un-American autocracy in its bald itself open to the charge of seeking to dictate how credit must be used and must not be used, to whom it may be advanced and to whom it must not be advanced.

Yet, events indicate that its action has finally had a sobering effect upon stock speculation. And that there was need for using every legitimate influence to discourage continuance of the speculative orgy on borrowed money, no thoughtful, unprejudiced person will deny.

What would have been the alternative? If the stock boom had been let on and on, and if more and more billions had been attracted from the uttermost ends of the earth, and if prices for both time money and day-to-day money had risen to greater and greater heights, there could have been only one upshot, a collapse. And that collapse might have upset the country's business as well as financial foundations.

Trade reports are mostly quite favorable. Building has decreased at current points, copper prices have slipped back from their abnormal peak; rubber has come down; but all automobile records are still being broken. The Steel Corporation gained 266,000 tons of unfilled orders during March, Railway shippers forecast increasing car requirements. Retail trade, though still spotty, seems to be going forward rather than backward. Employment reports are unusually favorable. Dividend increases far outnumber the very occasional dividend reductions.

Agricultural commodities have moved up during the week and it is now rather generally established that farm land values in most sections have turned the corner.

LEGISLATIVE MILL GRINDS AT CAPACITY

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Congress is in session. More laws on the way. No end in sight.

James A. Emery, prominent speaker before the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, contributes something on the subject that will interest all

Mr. Emery points out that "the Seventieth Congress received almost 37,000 legislative proposals, and it enacted 1035. At the same time there are in session some forty-two state legislatures, each of which has received a great body of suggestions with respect to the conduct of domestic business. Nearly 50,000 measures, assuming the averages of the past, will be proposed in the state legislatures. And out of these, if we may judge the future by experience, there will result about 12,000 new enactments in other words, we will have about 36,000 new statutes of state and federal enactments at the end of this year—an output represented on 43,500 pages of print

"A no mean authority on American municipal administration has said that a well informed police officer today ought to have a working knowledge of about 1,500 statutes. The average lawyer doesn't know that much. But it is required a knowledge of some 16,000 statutes to enable a policeman to perform his duties, what shall be said of the average business man—a man who lives his life in the complex web of legislation with an overhanging cloud of suggested enactment that may affect any department of his business or his other commercial relations?

"We can say, with such pride as arises out of the proposition, that we have the largest, if not the most efficient, law factory in the world, and that we enact more legislation in the United States in state and national legislatures than is proposed in the legislatures of the first five European powers combined. Mr. Emery

Another concern comes forward with record profits, offering an interesting index of business Operations of Real Silk Hosiery Mills and subsidiaries for the three month period, ending March 31 1929, resulted in a net profit of $418,786. This was after depreciation but before deduction for income taxes or certain extraordinary charges. The net profit for the corresponding period of 1928 the company suffered a loss of $343 627.

Porter M. Farrell, president, said, "Profit of $418,768 is the largest profit earned by Real Silk Hosiery for the corresponding period in any year during the history of the company. The largest previous period was in 1925, when earnings were $75,528 and for the fiscal year were $2,058,259."

The present boom in the motor industry, which started in the Spring of 1928, cannot, in the light of precedent, be expected to last more than two years, according to the latest report of The Brookmire Economic Service, Inc. The report estimates the current year's output at 5,500,000 cars and trucks in the United States and Canada, against 4,600,000 in 1928, but the industry is now running at the rate of 6,500,000 annually. An analysis by Brookmire indicates that not more than 4,500,000 to 4,750,000 units can be absorbed, counting in new users, replacements and export.

We have been hearing about saturation, point for years. Some authorities on the industry have declared there can be no saturation point as there are already towns where there are four automobiles to a family

Mr. Putnam follows the policy of declaring in cash only income received from dividends on investments, interest on bank deposits and call loans. Income received from other sources is invested and counted as capital gain.

Mr Putnam states that directors of Incorporated Investors believe that this conservative policy is essential for the proper operation of an investment fund since stock market profits cannot be regarded as recurrent, while dividends from seasoned securities are of a more recurrent nature

A 50 per cent stock dividend practically representing the appreciation in price of Incorporated Investors shares during the last year has been declared as of April 15 payable May 1. The cash dividend rate has not yet been set, but will be announced following a meeting of directors some time before the next cash dividend date July 15

Move to Abolish Call Loan Mart Opposed on Big Board

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, April 16—High executives of the New York Stock Exchange are cool to a revival of suggestions that the local money market could be strengthened by adopting the British system of periodical (fortnightly) settlements of stock deals in place of the American system of daily settlements

E. H. H. Simmons, president of the Stock Exchange, recently told me, "both American and foreign economists who have given much thought to the term settlement system, have expressed the opinion that the present daily settlement system on the New York Exchange is, for several important reasons, a superior method of settlement to the term settlements of Europe, and that European markets might benefit more by going over to a cash settlement than our market would by adopting a term settlement."

Advocates of the term settlement, which would tend to eliminate the call money market, with all its recent violent fluctuations have used the recent abnormal credit situation as a pretext for renewing their agitation for reform, and they have won some converts William Peter Hamilton, editor of the Wall Street Journal, who opposed the idea five years ago, now advocates a partial return of any form of "partial periodical" or term settlement of stock transactions," Mr. Johnson said, in a statement prepared exclusively for this column. "I strongly advocate our present method of daily settlement as the best and most conservative method which could be adopted. Any form of term settlement in this country would encourage reckless speculation during the term, unless it was maintained by a daily report of transactions with the payment of margins thereon to some central body or clearing house, and the necessity of making such a daily report accompanied by the deposit margin would multiply a large part of the saving in time and effort which a term settlement is supposed to afford. The enormous public speculation in when-issued stocks and their attractiveness to the public because they do not have to be paid for at once is an indication of the increase in reckless speculation which would attend a term settlement.

"The American public does not appreciate the fact that the term settlement in England is necessitated by the long delays in transferring their securities from the name of the seller to the name of the buyer. Such transfers of registered shares in England are made but once a month at the directors' meeting of the corporation. This factor in itself makes a daily settlement in England impracticable. On my last visit in London I was interested to find that the men in charge of the settlement department of the Stock Exchange felt that out method of settlement was much superior to theirs.

"Furthermore, our daily settlement is a distinct advantage in that it puts our business on practically a cash basis and each member of the Exchange is able daily to adjust his affairs to meet current conditions."

An interesting sidelight in connection with the recent epidemic of bank mergers has been the disposition of some large, long standing institutions to forsake the national bank charter for a State trust company charter. For example, in connection with its absorption of the United States Mortgage & Trust Co., the Chemical National Bank will relinquish its national charter and operate as a trust company under its name Chemical Bank & Trust Co. The old Irving National Bank, which grew rapidly as a result of a whole series of mergers, did precisely the same thing, and now operates under the name Irving Trust Co. Moreover, the National Bank of Commerce, which was one of the first institutions to enter the national banking system, will give up its national charter and operate under a trust company charter when it joins forces with the Guaranty Trust Co. Heretofore, when a state and national bank came together, the merged institution faced the alternative of picking between the two types of charter The National City Bank, however, has set a new fashion. In its new alliance with the Farmers Loan & Trust Co. it will keep the trust company operating as a separate unit under its own charter and will operate the commercial bank ing business under the name National City Bank, under its present national charter.

Until the Federal Reserve system was established, national bank charters were distinctly greater prestige value. But the Federal Reserve, in admitting State banks and trust companies to the system tended to put all types of banks on a parity. The national banks, through the Federal Reserve, obtained all the advantages of national banks except the banking privilege and retained greater freedom. The recent McFadden amendment to the Federal Reserve Act was intended to make the national charter more attractive, but apparently some outstanding New York financiers still prefer the State charter.

M. H. Fishman & Co. Sales Increase

M. H. Fishman & Co., Inc., which operates a chain of five cent to one dollar stores, reports gross sales of $91,498 for March against $28,934 last year, an increase of $62,465 or 216.23 per cent. For the first three months of 1929 sales were $180,739 against $79,467 in the same period last year, an increase of $101,272 or 127.43 per cent.

PASSENGER CAR OUTPUT AT HIGH LEVEL

Passenger car production is being maintained at a level equal to or above anything the industry has ever witnessed according to E. H. Cram, president of Cram's Automotive Reports, Incorporated, industry authority That output has reached its peak, there can be no doubt, and has become a matter of history Production activity Sales are good in practically all sections of the country and show a stronger tendency to improve even further Low priced cars are moving best in considerable volume while medium and high priced models are moving less rapidly, but may still be classified as good and on an upward trend

Truck production shows practically the same trend as does passenger car output It is being currently maintained at record high levels and there is no immediate indication of any marked curtailment Sales are high and undoubtedly close to the year's peak

Light industry models form the basis for most of the business and are now moving in an extremely heavy volume. Export sales are substantially heavier than they have been at any time during the 1928 year which, of course, indicates that they are at record levels

The production continues at peak levels, as the result of heavy dealer ordering, which in turn, has been stimulated by a steady improving consumer's market which has resulted from better weather

Consumer buying, while extremely heavy, is felt to be far from its peak which will in all probability not be reached for at least ninety days. Original equipment orders are heavy and show no sign of slackening Mail order sales are also large The crude rubber market has developed an easier tone and with the market becoming more stabilized, there is less possibility of price increases in the immediate future

PRODUCTION of crude lead in United States and Mexico totaled 78,790 tons in March, against 71,659 tons in February and 82,359 tons in January

PRODUCTION of refined lead amounted to 72,427 tons in March against 70,485 tons in February and 83,401 tons in January.

STAGE SUCCESS RIGHTS DENIED FILM CO.

By LOUELLA A. PARSONS
Copyright, 1929, Universal Service, Inc.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 16—Winfield Sheehan's frantic telephone call to New York to purchase the screen rights to "The Yellow Ticket," immortalized on the stage some years ago by Florence Reed, brings forth an interesting question

What will happen to the stage play when W. A. Brady, Sam Harris and the Shuberts are all filming their own stage productions?

W. A. Brady has very frankly stated that he will never sell the screen rights to "Street Scene" because he wants to produce it himself; and Sam Harris is holding on to "Congai" for the same reason.

This threatened famine need not be taken too seriously by the film producers. Authors will now write directly for the screen—and that is what they should have done a long time ago. The technique is so absolutely different that the successful talkie of the future will not be adapted from any stage success but will be an original, written by some one of our prominent playwrights

Another angle is the ransacking of old-time plays the film rights of which are owned by the various picture companies. One by one, these famous old stage hits are being brought back and remade Had W. A. Brady Sam Harris and the Shuberts planned to make talkies a year ago, it would have been something to think about. Today there is less cause for worry.

ONE of William Haines' most ardent admirers is an Atlanta high school girl who never misses one of his pictures and who is eager to know if he is just as amusing off as on the screen, to which I am glad that she would not be disappointed if she were to meet him She asked me to write something about him here in Atlanta. So here goes.

Billy is getting ready to make a sequel to "Brown of Harvard" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. I rather suspect that if "Brown of Harvard" were not so recent a picture it would be brought back and given dialogue, for it is one of the most successful of the Haines pictures and it was really the one that established Mr. Haines as a star The sequel, I am told, will be started immediately, although as yet no director has been named.

I HAVE been reading a most amusing biography of Henry VIII, and it started me wondering why so charming a picture as "When Knighthood Was in Flower" could not be brought back and remade as a talkie. Marion Davies has had better pictorial backing but she has never played a more delightful role than that of the madcap niece of the wicked Henry.

Wouldn't "Knighthood" make a delightful talkie, providing someone furnishes the right dialogue for Miss Davies? "Ann Boleyn," the most romantic of all the rascally Henry's wives, is to live again in a short reel of that name, with Anders Randolf playing Henry

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will release it. To me Lynn Harding will always be the perfect Henry VIII. One can never forget his performance, both on the stage with Sir Beerbohm Tree and in Miss Davies' picture, "When Knighthood Was in Flower."

WHILE we're on the subject of originals being written directly for the screen, we might note that Paramount is about to produce an operetta which Guy Bolton has written for Jeanette Mac-Donald, who is the author of "Sally," "Rosalie" and dozens of other popular musical comedy successes.

Jesse L. Lasky can indeed feel that it is a feather in the company's cap when Mr. Bolton writes an operetta for the movies Ernest Lubitsch will direct. I wonder if Herr Lubitsch is pleased for he has often said that he prefers to do period pictures, and when it comes to grouping and ensembles there is nobody so well qualified in filmdom than Lubitsch

Just why Paramount feels it is necessary to insert this type of things is returning to this country is a mystery. He has signed to make pictures for Jack P. Pickford, a star who at the time "The Patriot" was made because sure one was proud to talk for him in the dialogue.

You cannot blame him for that "The Patriot" was one of the best silent pictures ever made and the artist likes to have someone else talk for him since voice is an intangible part of anyone's personality. If Jannings does come back it will be a surprise, for he and Frau Gussie are making their arrangements to take up their residence permanently in Germany.

Carl Linder, Former Winner, Enters B. A. A. Marathon

FAST FIELD IN LONG GRIND

158 Plodders Now Entered in April 19th Classic; Record in Danger

The entries of Carl Linder of the B. A. A., Willie Kyronen and Karl Koski of the Finnish American A. C., New York for the B. A. A. Marathon make the Hopkinton starting lineup as powerful as any in recent years. All the old guard of marathoners has entered now.

There are so many experienced capable runners signed to start that the unknowns are going to have a tough time to finish within shouting distance of the leaders on Patriots' Day p. m.

Carl Linder, who jogged across the finish line first in one B. A. A. Marathon, came in sixth but yearand fifth the year before that. He is one of the gang whose presence seems necessary for the yearly long distance trek.

VETERANS HAVE EDGE

Year after year the same men have had things all their own way in the tough run, with the exception of the year Johnny Miles breezed home in front. Clarence DeMar, Whitey Michelson and a few others have been in the money each year.

And the bunch of plodders have become familiar to the few hundred thousand fans who line the 26 miles, 385 yards of roadway on the 19th of April.

This year the entries were slow coming in and it was figured that the letdown after the Olympic year would be responsible for a host of classy entries in the B. A. A. run.

But the lure of the race is too much for the boys who in many cases, train through the year as one or two shots at Marathon glory.

And at the present time the 158 men entered in the run include some of the best long distance runners in the world. The run this year will rank with the best in B. A. A. history, and with a break in weather conditions, a new record may be set up.

At any rate the competitors and the fans who wait hours for a momentary glimpse at the front few in the race, will be satisfied.

This Marathon game is a unique thing in sport. There is no question of professionalism among the Marathoners. They do not receive a cent for their efforts.

Yet they train as though their lives depended on it, and on the day of the run give every bit of energy to stay near the leaders. The lure of the thing has them and it holds them.

GREAT SPORT THRILL

For the spectators there is a thrill that nothing in sport exactly compares with when a long, lanky clad figure appears far up the avenue.

Certainly there is something appealing about a lone, tiny, tired athlete, moving along with regular stride, like a piece of machinery.

Few who saw the 1928 Marathon ever will forget little Joie Ray, his feet in shreds and his face a mask of agony as he sped down to the B. A. A. clubhouse.

It was a "thrill that comes once in a lifetime."

The Marathoners are often termed "nuts," but running has something in them that is worth a lot.

The greatest free show in the world.

Ace Hudkins Trumps Armand Emanuel

Wrigley Field, Los Angeles, April 15 (AP)—Ace Hudkins, Nebraska "Wildcat," tonight battered and tore his way to a decisive 10-round victory over Armand Emanuel, youthful San Francisco heavyweight, to prove the fallacy of the age-old adage that "a good big man is better than a good little man."

Chicago Runners in Big Penn Carnival

Philadelphia, Pa., April 16—Athletes representing Chicago University will compete in nine events in the 35th annual University of Pennsylvania Relay Carnival on April 26 and 27

Maroon-jerseyed athletes have been competitors in the relays since 1898 when they won the one-mile championship race in three minutes 27 1-5 seconds.

Four times since that date Chicago has been the victor in the one-mile championship.

Chicago won the two-mile championship in 1919 and the four-mile title in 1917, in addition to triumphs by individual athletes in the special events.

AFTER ONE-MILE TITLE

Chicago is anxious this year to win the one-mile championship. An unfortunate occurrence a year ago prevented the Maroon from annexing the title.

Glen, one of the most brilliant middle distance performers in the country, dropped the baton at a critical moment in the last lap of the race when to all appearances he team had the race in hand.

Glen is another member this year and will probably have as one of his strongest competitors Swope of Dartmouth, one of the best quarter milers in the East. The Green won the indoor mile championship in the intercollegiates.

VETERAN RELAY TEAM

The Chicago team in the mile is the same as raced last year. It includes H. Hayden, N. Root, E. Schuls and V. Gist. The same combination will run in the half mile sprint relay and the sprint medley relay.

In the distance medley Chicago will be represented by Livingston, Williams, Wexman and Letton. The same quartet will also run in the two-mile championship event.

In the field events the Maroon will have Warren Kelin in the discus, N. E. Root in the broad jump, Charles Weever and W. Klein in the shotput, and Samuel Frey in the high jump.

FUTURE BABE RUTHS AND TY COBBS---ATTENTION!

Again next Monday, the columns of the Boston Evening American's sporting pages will be open, free of charge, to any and all challenges any sandlot nine in New England may care to make.

A list of games wanted will be printed every Monday, and on other days, too, if the demand warrants.

Address all challenges to Games Wanted Editor, Sports Department, Boston Evening American, Boston, Mass.

Also send in a brief story of your team and pictures of players, if you wish, and these will be used from time to time.

This invitation, of course, applies to semi-pro clubs as well.

Honeyboy Finnegan Loses to King Tut

Philadelphia, April 16 Honeyboy Finnegan, Boston lightweight, was defeated in a ten-round go here by King Tut, Minneapolis warrior.

B. C. Squad Picked for Meet With Navy

Coach Jack Ryder has selected 23 of his squad of 25 men who will make the trip to Annapolis next Saturday for the dual meet with the Navy. Jack will select the other two boys today.

SHEA IN BOSTON TODAY FOR GO WITH MARTIN

Eddie Shea of Chicago, one of the hardest punching little men that ever graced the ring, arrives in the Hub today for his 10-round slugfest with Andy Martin of this city in the windup of the all-featherweight show at the Boston Garden, Friday night.

Shea will be accompanied to this city by Eddie Anderson, the 22-year-old Wyoming cowboy, who fights on the same card. Hub fans will see two of the best featherweights in the West when these step into the ring on the holiday night.

SHEA CONFIDENT

The Chicago star was looking toward an easy victory. When Eddie Mack first clinched this holiday show, Shea was matched to meet Young Montreal, the Providence veteran, but Mack scratched Monty.

Promoter Mack replaced Montreal with Andy Martin, Hub featherweight, and the show today looms up as much more interesting than originally carded.

The Chicago boy has scored five consecutive knockouts this year. He has stopped Tony Mandell, Lou Bloom, Joe Malone, Billy Shaw and Carl Tremaine. He is the biggest fistic card in the Middle West and this will be his first appearance in a Boston ring.

SHEA COLORFUL

Shea is a colorful fighter, who always keeps on top of his opponent and who generally wins by the knockout route, yet he will find Martin a willing mixer.

Martin recently defeated Benny Bass.

In his last two bouts, Martin defeated Johnny Dutto of Cleveland and Midget Mike O'Dowd. In his last start in a Boston ring, Martin easily defeated Dominic Petrone.

Martin is being brought to a title tight by Billy Henderson of Rox bury, whom it will be remembered directed the affairs of Eddie Shea in.

Hub fans will get a peek at an other title contender when Eddie Anderson comes here to meet Jake Zeramby of Lynn in the second 10-rounder.

ZERAMBY READY

Zeramby is risking his fistic future in meeting Anderson. Winner of 31 bouts out of 32, Zeramby now thinks he is ready for these top notchers.

As the result of the change in the card, Harry Bilitman of Philadelphia will face Henry Janco, the popular Lawrence boy, who has recorded a streak of knockouts.

Emory Cabana, Philadelphia's hard-punching featherweight, will face Jimmy Drew of Worcester in the fourth 10-rounder, while Eddie Curley of this city meets Benny Kaufman in the opening 10-rounder.

5 New B. C. Trackmen Show Real Promise

Joe Merrick, Al Morelli, Harry Downes, Jim Sullivan and Jack more are five men of Boston Colleges who showed promise in the cinder path practice just completed at the Heights.

Merrick, a brother of Bob, who was a champion hurdler in 1924 at B. C., placed in both hurdle races. Jackmore got points in four events and Harry Downes was the javelin in his second time out from Capt. Wilczewski.

These three boys are all freshmen and unavailable for the dual meet with the Navy at Annapolis next Saturday afternoon.

Entries Close Today for 10 Mile Road Race

Over 80 entries have been received to date for the 10-mile handicap road race of the Michael J. O'Connell Post, American Legion, which will be held Patriot's Day at 10 a. m.

Among the entries received are those of William Simons, the winner of the time prize last Saturday in the Cathedral run; Ilmnie Zinck, a Jamaica Plain boy who is always up among the prize winners; George Dolan, who was the scratch man in the legion race last year, and many others who have been consistent winners in cross country races.

Ten beautiful trophies and a watch will be awarded the winners. Entries close today with William J. Brennan, manager, 179 South st., Jamaica Plain, care of the American Legion.

Winchester High Tennis Tourney On

Winchester high school's fourth annual spring vacation tennis tournament started at Palmer st. playground under direction of the park board.

The boys' play advanced to the third round. The girls' matches numbered nine in the first round.

The third round match played found Donald Bates the victor over William Abbott by scores of 6—1, 6—1.

MR. BOSTON

By Jack Conway

"I FIND the public once more getting steamed up over the B. A. A. Marathon which will be held on Patriots' Day," said Mr. Boston. "I always get a kick out of the holding of this long grind as it is one of the signs of the passing of such things as snow and sleet storms.

"Other than that I never could get wildly excited over the fact that more than 100 young and middle age men each year decide to punish their bodies by running 26 miles for the edification of 200,000 persons and for what glory goes with silver cups and medals.

"There is not any sane reason why there should be a Marathon race. The progress of the world would continue even though our young and middle age men did not insist upon burning up their vitality by engaging in a Marathon race. I have often thought that this wasted vitality might be applied to something worth while.

"Marathon running was important in the days when foot travel was the chief kind of communication between an army and its base of supplies or with some allied army. But nowadays with airplanes, automobiles and fast trains the world no longer needs young men who are capable of running 26 miles.

"The distressing part of the whole thing is that a common alley type of poodle could defeat the best of our Marathoners if given some incentive to run 26 miles. But it would take quite a prize to convince even a poodle that such a task was worth the reward.

"THE advocates of Marathon running cannot argue that the sport inspires the youth of the country as all distance runners must live model lives. I have talked with winners of B. A. A. classics who have told me that they trained on cigarettes and good beer. Others have informed me they had a fondness for wine with a little splash of night life.

"The average successful athlete, of course, must follow the straight and narrow path to reach the heights of success, but then I have known some carefree souls who have broken all of the rules and who have still managed to do fairly well.

"IF you think it is a cinch to cover 26 miles on foot, try running for a street car. The average person's supply of wind is usually exhausted before he has covered 100 yards.

"BUT then, I suppose, there are duffer kinds of sport than Marathon running. I call your attention to the gallant bunioneers under the direction of Cash and Carry Pyle who are pounding the roads in the direction of the Coast. They at least are seeking a substantial cash prize which will be much more consoling to the years to come than a flock of cups and a collection of medals.

"PERHAPS after all, Marathon running and bunioneering is not any more foolish than playing the ponies, trying to beat the stock market, making whoopee at the night clubs or taking part in some other form of thrill producer.

"IF I ever get the urge to cover 26 miles in record time, I'm going to ask Bobby O'Brien over at the East Boston Airport to take me for a hop in one of his brand new air chariots. I won't get any blisters off my feet anyway, even though I may risk receiving a few dents in my head."

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

As usual, Central, Midland and Southern are off to a fine start in the Women's Golf Association team match championships. Central and Midland delivered 6 and 3 defeats to Northern and The Country Club, respectively, while Southern took seven points from Brae Burn.

In spite of the cold wind which swept the scenes of the W. G. A. team matches, it was one of the best opening days in years.

Walter Phipps, the former champion at Scarboro, has been appointed caddy master at the Worcester Country Club. Phipps is well with the best amateurs in this section and now that he will have ample opportunity to practice should take his place among the best of the local professionals.

It was expected that the loss through marriage, of Miss Theresa Winsor and Miss Olive Bottrick would bring the Central district down to the strength of its opponents. However, the defending champions have acquired the services of Miss Dorothy Richard of Cleveland, O., the Buckeye State champion.

Eddie Murphy, who is to captain the Charles River Country Club four ball team, arrived home from Pinehurst and he was at the Newton course late in the afternoon for an hour's practice. Eddie stated that although Jim Baldwin of Concord did not do well in the qualifying round of the North and South he played wonderful golf during the remainder of his stay at the Carolina resort.

Mrs. R. M. Gardiner of Weston performed a hitherto unaccomplished feat by defeating Mrs. S. D. Waxman, the former district champion, 9 to 8, during the Central-Northern match.

Going to the 11th hole at The Country Club, Mrs. R. A. Hayes of Charles River looked like a sure winner over Miss Molly Adams, for she was five up with only eight holes to play.

Mrs. Hayes made the fatal mistake of easing up, and, as is invariably the case, was unable to get going again. Miss Adams was returned a winner in a 19-hole match.

The interscholastic championship is creating much interest among the schoolboy golfers, but they do not notice to the idea of only two players from each school being eligible.

By taking Mrs. J. H. Hainan to the 20th hole, Mrs. Neal W. Webster of Merrimack Valley proves to the world that she is back on her game form. Webster was ill last season and did not play up to her usual form, but evidently she has entirely recovered and is in for a fine season.

Henri Bourneuf of Charles River has been elected captain of the Newton high school golf team. The Garden City high school will again be represented by a strong team.

With such players as Steve Wasielewski, Bill Donnelley, Bill Nelson, Henry Donnelley and Henri Bourneuf, as a nucleus, Newton should have another championship aggregation.

Miss Helen Stone, who played for The Country Club last season and was one of the most consistent Clyde Park winners, is still in the South and will not be available until a later date. As Miss Stone is one of the best looking prospects in the W. G. A., her return will strengthen The Country Club.

Harold W. Pierce, a former president of the Massachusetts Golf Association, is rapidly recovering from his recent operation. He paid a visit to The Country Club but had other matters of more importance on his mind than golf.

The aforementioned Mr. Robertson will do the Tribal pitching honors, according to Uncle Robby's announcement, Watson Clark will be on the firing line for the Red Sox. This left-handed young man gave the Braves plenty of heartaches last season, and made them miserable also down South this spring.

BOY SMITH READY

Robert Smith had a whale of a time in the Florida exercises. He looked like a million dollars each time he stepped out, including appearances against the Yankees and Athletics who can hit that spot.

Bob was a standout last year, and should be one of this campaign's hurling aces. He has a good defensive infield back of him for this jaunt, and that should make a difference of half a dozen games.

For the Braves have been strengthened mightily in the way of defense. The fans who saw the Sunday game realize that. It was in evidence down in the South, even though the boys had their sour days.

A good ball club must have a snappy second base combination, and Maranville and Boley give promise up one of the best in the game. Veteran Rabbit may look slow at times, but through the long stretch of the race, but for a starter, he is as frisky and fast as ever.

FANS WATCH MANAGEMENT

Boston fans are interested in the new players—Harper and Clark and Percy Jones and the rest—but more than all they are concerned about the management of the Braves.

Judge Fuchs is going through with the label stuff. He isn't going to be a silent partner of Johnny Evers and Hank Gowdy. He will direct the team from the bench.

Naturally the boys, and the country for that matter, are going to see what happens. This, and the fact that we have Sunday baseball at last, accounts for a great revival of interest in Boston. There will be big crowds out as soon as real baseball weather arrives.

After that it will be up to the teams. Both the Braves and Red Sox start off with better prospects than have been actually around for a dozen seasons.

BROOKLYN HANDICAPPED

The Brooklyn team has been having a tough time all spring. Uncle Robby is what you might call restricted in the matter of trading for players. There is no harmony in the official part of the club.

The outfit didn't look any too good to begin with, and injuries piled up thick and fast. Most of the cripples have recovered, but it will be a couple of weeks before the team hits its best shape.

Robbie has good pitching, however, and that's of prime importance in the spring. His three veterans—Clark and Mc-Weeney—are ready, so the Uncle is fairly confident of getting his share of the season series, which pulls up the curtain.

The Braves all are physically fit for the kickoff. There is a real couple on the squad, although Zach Taylor has a bumped knee that will keep him up for a few days, and Lester Bell still is bothered with a sore hip.

DUGAN STARTS

That will give Joseph Dugan a chance to start off at third base which he can play as very few others. Joseph still packs a couple of extra pounds but he needs that down the chilly spring breezes. And the former Holy Cross performer has that under the spring.

The Braves will start Earl Clarke, in center field, against southpaws and Johnny Heinie Mueller is there when right handers are working. Heinie started on a wild hitting rampage as the southern campaign ceased, and, of course, will be worked as long as the swatting streak holds out.

George Harper will be at left, and he shoo'l help the club materially. Harper is the fastest fielder in the world, but is as good as the average, and he can hit hard and consistently. He was the steadiest thumper of all Braves, once he had found his eye in the south.

A good start will mean much to the Braves, and unsettled Robins seem to offer the opportunity, provided the Braves can match up some good pitching. With Smith all in it will indeed be a tough proposition for the Dodgers.

Judge Fuchs just making claims at the eve of his surprising baseball wrecking.

"We started out with a definite training program in view," comments the Judge. "And we went through with it. Physically, our club is in shape, while practically every player ready to start at high speed. We believe we have the proper spirit and confidence.

We will stand or fall on results. Hopes don't mean a thing in this game. We have done everything possible to make a team with the material we had. We'll let that do the talking for us."

And Johnny Evers and Hank Gowdy, the strategical "eyes," chip in with the same fashion. There's teamwork at the head of the club.

WIGWAM CHIEFS HUNT ROBINS

JOHNNY EVERS—HANK GOWDY—RABBIT MARANVILLE

These men were headliners in the great drive of 1914 that carried the Braves to a pennant and a world title. They carry the spirit of '14 yet. If they can impart their own pep and baseball knowledge to the Warriors, Hub fans will have plenty to cheer about during the coming months.

BADGER TRACK MEET REVIVED

Madison, Wis. April 16—Track fans throughout the state are eagerly awaiting the revival of the old Wisconsin College meet, which will be staged by the University of Wisconsin at Camp Randall next Saturday, April 20. The entries of Marquette University, and Beloit Ripon, Lawrence, and Carroll Colleges were assured Coach Tom Jones today.

The meet was last he l some 25 years ago, as the highlight of the Badger State season. It was usually held late in the year and was discontinued because it conflicted with the conference schedule of the Badgers.

JONES REVIVES EVENT

Coach Jones has been intending to revive the event for some years, and this season withdrew his entries from the Kansas Relays in order to have a full squad of men to compete with the state schools.

In the old days, Beloit College's powerful teams habitually finished one-two in the final table of points. Maj. John L. Griffith, commissioner for the Western conference, competed as a Beloit star. This year Beloit was the first school to enter.

Five places will be scored in the meet, with golf, silver, bronze and copper medals going to the first four finishers in each event.

Marquette is expected to give the Badgers the most trouble, although reports from the college squads indicate that they will be represented by capable athletes in every event. One of the features of the day should be the meeting of Capt. Phil Larson with Treppa and Meudelsohn, the Hilltop sprinters.

BADGERS IN EACH EVENT

Coach Jones has entered five Badgers in every event except the javelin throw and pole vault. August Backus, the Milwaukee football guard, will make his first varsity appearance in the discus throw, as will Sam Behr, the Big Ten indoor shot putting champion. Both have been displaying good form in tossing the platter.

In addition to running the 100 and 200-yard dashes, Capt. Larson will be seen in the broad jump. The Madison boy appear to be in for a great season in this event, as he cleared 24 feet in the recent Southern Methodist University games in Texas.

Art Frisch, the hockey goalie, has been working out daily with the harriers. Jerry Bushnell, Allen and Rottman are others entered in this attraction.

Binish Signs

Madison, Wis. April 16—Stan Binish Green Bay, Wis., an outstanding Wisconsin tackle for the last two seasons, has signed as assistant line coach at Va. Military Institute, Lexington, Va. He will begin his new duties next September.

Red Sox After 1st War With Yankees

New York, April 16—Bill Carrigan, with the strongest Red Sox team he has steered in his modern three-year career, came to the stadium today to open the 1929 campaign against the champion Yankees.

But a storm arrived before the Sox did, and the opening game has been postponed until tomorrow.

Bill, with his customary nonchalance, admitted he would be surprised if he didn't get the long end of this first series, even though the champs look like the greatest team in years.

Carrigan intends to use big Charlie Ruffing, who was poison for the Yanks a year ago, in this opener, saving his real ace, Ed Morris, for a warmer day.

The invading manager has five pitchers he intends to use in turn, but the Babe Ruths have a habit of wrecking the best plans of visiting managers.

Waite Hoyt, considered by the experts far greater right hander in the game today, was to do the serving for Miller Huggins who had all his sluggers primed for the affair.

Babe Ruth and Gehrig started hitting homers for the mite manager in the last part of the exhibition series, so all is well along the Concourse.

Rain, Wind, Stop Tech Crew Practice

Annapolis, Md., April 16—The crews of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology arrived here. The two shells were rigged immediately and the work was completed shortly.

A cold driving rain and a strong southeast wind prevented any workout in the shells before lunch.

The afternoon practice was scheduled for 4 o'clock, but as the rain and wind continued in force strong enough to prevent the launching of any shells, the row was called off and a short calisthenic drill was substituted.

The navy crews were unable to get out on the river and their workout was confined to a run around the drill field.

Amateur Champion Faces "Pro" Charges

Chicago, April 16 (AP)—Jimmy Conen, Central Amateur Athletic Union 112-pound champion, has been charged with professionalism and may be barred from the National A. A. U. tournament next week.

Within an hour after Chase was entered in the boxing tournament, the Metropolitan A. A. U. of New York protested, advising tournament officials it would forward proof he was a professional. Chase denies the charge.

Innovation Made

Princeton, N. J. April 16—An innovation has appeared in the training methods of the Princeton crews as they prepare for the opening regatta of the season with M. I. T. two weeks off. When the Tiger varsity oarsmen are not rowing together some of them have been working out on Lake Carnegie in single sculls to develop a smooth handling of the outboard work.

Eagles Interested in College League

Graduate Manager Frank Reynolds of Boston College has answered a telegram from Jack Coffey, Fordham coach, stating that B. C. is "very much interested" in the new intercollegiate baseball league that Coffey has been trying to form.

For many years such a league has been pending and Boston College has always been favorable However, it is some job to get all the colleges to agree to the terms of the circuit and attempts in the past have failed.

Dynamite Gus Downs Ganson in Lynn Go

The largest crowd ever to witness a wrestling match in Salem saw Gus Sonnenberg, world champion, defeat Jack Ganson of California in straight falls at the North st. rink.

The champion's flying tackle won the first fall in 24 minutes and 10 seconds, while the second was obtained in six minutes and five seconds with a crotch hold and body slam.

Stanley Stasiak of Poland threw Charles Donnell, Norwood police man, in 25 minutes and 30 seconds of grappling in the semifinal. Dr. Ed. Sullivan, Boston, tossed Bill Rudy, Billerica with a crotch hold and double wristlock in 16 minutes and 12 seconds to open the show

Fall River Soccer Team Protests Game

Fall River, April 16—The Raffles football club of this city, defeated 3 to 1 by the first German-American F. C. at Newark, Sunday. In the eastern final for the national amateur soccer trophy has filed a protest with the United States Football Association on five grounds.

VERMONT NINE FACES B. C. IN HUB THURSDAY

Burlington, Vt., April 16—The University of Vermont ball team is getting a little outdoor practice and opening up into form for the opening of the New England schedule against Boston College at Boston on Thursday.

The result of the annual southern jaunt shed a ray of hope for a successful season into the hearts of followers of the sport at Vermont, where first-class teams have become a tradition, dating back to the famous teams of the early 90's which stamped Vermont as a baseball college.

Coach Gardner took South this year the greenest bunch of rookies that ever wore the uniform, but they won three games out of six breaking even on a schedule of 10 games that had four cancellations.

Two or three of the men had seen a little service before, but the only real veteran, with the possible exception of Morse, who was shifted to the outfield after playing a season two or three years ago on the infield, was Captain Macomber, an outfielder, who was shoved in behind the bat to stop the gap that was left there as well as to bolster by the departure of last year's all Emes.

O'Keefe has had a little experience, and was with the team when it started, but was taken out by a bad case of appendicitis. Howard in the outfield played part of the season last year, and Wood had pitched in a game or two.

Beyond that everything was new. But the team came through with a very respectable showing and has everything to gain and nothing to lose in the future.

The twirlers are showing up better than expected, although Coach Gardner's big trouble is a green pitching staff. Wood turned in a win in his only start on the trip as did McBride, another right hander.

Rutkowski, a yearling, was beaten in both his attempts, while Jimmy Kendrick, slim southpaw, is still out of the box from running and losing one but allowing only 12 hits in both contests.

BOYS' FIVES WAR IN SEMIFINALS

The last rounds of some of the amateur basketball tournament of the Boys' Club of Boston will be played tomorrow and Thursday nights with the finals to be run off on the main court of the gymnasium, with provision made for spectators.

There will be six games with 12 teams competing each night, the winners to meet Saturday in the finals for the championship of their respective classes.

Judging from the calibre of the teams that are still competing, the fans are assured of witnessing the greatest basketball treat of the season.

Beginning tomorrow, 24 teams will be left of the original 200 entries

No League for Brown

Providence, R. I., April 16—While no official sentiment was expressed on the proposition, it is unlikely that Brown will enter the proposed 10-team Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League.

Four Eastern Major League Openers Off

By Associated Press

The entire opening day program of major league baseball in the East was washed out today by a driving rainstorm, backed by a cold northwest gale that dissipated all enthusiasm for inaugural ceremonies and base hits.

Three of the games scheduled in the East were postponed early in the day, while the fourth game, at Boston was cancelled at noon.

The bad weather break, one of the worst any opening day has suffered deferred the Washington-Athletics game at the national capital, where President Hoover was to throw out the first ball; the Yankees-Red Sox affair at the Yankee stadium, with Commissioner Landis on hand, and the getaway performance of the Giants and Phillies at Philadelphia.

Meanwhile it seemed probable the Western half of the program would escape the main attack of the elements, including the all star National League event at Chicago, featuring the Cubs and Pirates. It was clear, but cold there.

Clear weather also was reported at Cincinnati for the Cincinnati-Reds and St. Louis Browns-Chicago White Sox and Brooks. It was cloudy, however, at Cleveland for the game between Detroit and the Indians.

Elaborate opening ceremonies, planned especially for the Eastern American League games at Washington and New York, will take place tomorrow, if there is any improvement in the weather, but conditions of any reasonable variety are not expected before Thursday.

The postponements not only dampen the enthusiasm that was ready for a spontaneous outbreak, but are likely to cut down the attendance figure.

It had been anticipated that 30,000 would see the Yankees start their quest for a fourth straight title, with 25,000 on hand for the big event in Washington.

The weather also was dirty out of Cincinnati, the postponement in that city also forcing the second game of a two game stand to north. Washington was the earliest to decide play was impossible, fully six hours before game time, followed shortly by Philadelphia and New York.

RAWSON FIGHTS DE VITO MEETS MILLS AT ARENA ZBYSZKO

Big Boy Rawson, heavyweight from Dorchester, whose string of knockout victories came to a halt a month ago when Bob Mills knocked him out, will meet Mills for the second time at the Arena a week from Friday night.

The match was clinched by Bob McKirdy, Arena matchmaker, and Harry Levy, manager of Mills, signed.

"Rawson will be right this time," said Lacey. "He went into the ring last time with a roll of fat on his waist, because he figured he could beat any heavyweight with his punch.

"Now he realizes the value of training. He seems like a willing, ambitious boy, and is especially anxious to knock out Mills.

Rawson since his defeat has been training at Tunney Gymnasium for the past week and will train there for a week remaining, he will probably be in the best condition of his career. Mills is training at Kelley & Haves Gymnasium every afternoon under the eye of Kelley.

RAWSON CONFIDENT

Rawson will be facing a big handicap. Very few fighters have ever beaten a man who formerly knocked him out, but the youthful rancher is confident that he will batter Mills to defeat.

In the third round of their previous fight, he put Mills on the floor three times but the giant farmer got up each time and then went on with an amazing show of stamina to slash his way to the second victory of his career.

Their return match is bound to be another vicious slugfest.

Colonel Bob McKirdy is working on the preliminary card.

Pioneer Gridmen Start Spring Work

B. U. spring football practice starts tomorrow at Nickerson Field, Weston, Head Coach Brown announced. He will work with a picked squad of about 20. The group will be made up of veterans.

Brown plans to concentrate mainly on developing the centre trio which was broken when Capt Arthur Dorfman, pivot, and Chauncey French, left guard, completed their four years of play.

The new athletic plant will prove a big asset to Coach Brown in this season's spring drill, as many of the new men are members of the squads. He will be able to put them occasionally from the side lines on the regular squads.

Martha Lee Tells of Malt Extracts

JUST when I've about decided that there simply can't be anything new under the cookery sun, something comes along so new and worthwhile as to upset all my conclusions. Right now it's the use of malt extracts in foods.

(c) Bachrach

Martha Lee

Malt extract has long held an important place in the industrial preparation of food. Bakers and confectioners use it widely. Manufacturers of famous breakfast foods bring palatability to their products by flavoring with malt extract.

For some food uses plain malt extract imparts the desired taste, for others the addition of the tang derived from fragrant hops is an advantage. Malt extract is a valuable addition to the diet, and a delightful means of bringing new taste to everyday cooking. Its use in bread, for instance, will decrease the leavening time, and produce a larger, lighter loaf of better texture, deeper crust, and more appetizing appearance. Bread and other foods baked with malt extract will also keep their freshness and tastiness much longer.

The following recipes have been thoroughly tried in the model kitchen:

FLUFFY CORN BREAD

3 c. white flour.
2 c. cornmeal.
3 tbsps. baking powder.
½ c. sugar.
1 tsp. salt.
6 tbsps. butter or lard.
3 c. milk.
1 tsp. malt extract (hop flavored).
2 eggs.

Sift the dry ingredients together and add the eggs. Mix the malt extract (hop flavored) and butter with the milk, beat with a fork to blend well. Mix all together thoroughly and pour into greased pans. Bake in a moderate oven at 350° F.

SOFT GINGERBREAD

2½ c. flour.
¼ tsp. cloves.
1 tsp. each ginger and cinnamon.
1 tsp. baking powder.
½ c. shortening.
1 c. boiling water.
2 tsps. soda.
2 beaten eggs.
½ c. brown sugar.
1 tbsp. malt extract (hop flavored).
¾ c. molasses.

Sift the dry ingredients together. Mix the molasses, shortening, malt extract and soda thoroughly with the boiling water. Add the beaten eggs. Add to the other ingredients; mix well. Bake in moderate oven at 325° F. until done—about 45 minutes.

OATMEAL BREAD

1 cake compressed yeast.
1 tbsp. sugar.
1½ tbsps. malt extract (hop flavored).
2 tbsps. lard.
3 tsps. salt.
4 c. lukewarm water.
9 c. sifted flour.
3 c. rolled oats.
6 tbsps. molasses.

Make a sponge, dissolve the sugar, malt extract and yeast in 3 c. of lukewarm water. Add the flour; beat well and rise until double in bulk. Mix the melted lard, molasses, salt and the rest of the water together. Add enough flour to make a smooth dough, knead well. Let rise in greased bowl. Knead, mold into loaves, place in oiled baking pans and let rise until almost double. When light, bake in hot oven for the first quarter of an hour, reduce the heat to moderate to finish baking, about 45 minutes.

APRICOT CAKE

1-3 c. shortening.
1 c. sugar.
1 tbsp. malt extract (hop flavored).
2 eggs.
1 c. apricot pulp.
2 c. pastry flour.
1 tsp. baking powder.
½ tsp. soda.
1 tsp. cinnamon.
½ tsp. cloves.

Cream the shortening, sugar and malt extract together. Add the egg yolks; beat. Add the apricot pulp. Sift the other dry ingredients together, and to creamed mixture and mix well. Fold in the stiffly-beaten egg whites. Bake in layers in hot oven at 375° F. for 25 minutes. This can also be baked as cup cakes.

HOME-MADE TAFFY

2 c. sugar.
2 c. corn syrup.
2 tbsps. malt extract (plain).
½ c. water.

Cook to a good hard ball, but not until it cracks. Then set off fire and add 2 level tbsps. lard and 2 level tbsps. of butter. Stir until mixed through and then add malt extract and a pinch of salt. Then pour in buttered pans and let cool until almost cold. Then put on a hook and pull as long as possible. This can be flavored lemon or vanilla. If bitter chocolate is used, add 2 oz.

CHOCOLATE FUDGE

3 c. sugar.
1½ c. milk.
1 tbsp. malt extract (hop flavored).
1¼ tbsps. butter.
3 squares chocolate.

Stir the grated chocolate, sugar, malt extract (hop flavored) and milk until the sugar is dissolved. Boil to soft ball stage or 234° F. Add the butter, remove from fire, cool to lukewarm and beat until creamy. Pour into buttered tins.

MEAT LOAF

1 lb. round steak of beef.
½ lb. cured ham.
1 c. bread crumbs.
1 tbsp. salt.
¼ tsp. pepper.
Few grains cayenne.
1 tbsp. vinegar.
1 tbsp. catsup.
2 eggs.
¼ c. milk.
2 tbsps. butter.
1½ tbsps. malt extract (hop flavored) dissolved in milk.

Grind the meat. Add the rest of the ingredients. Moisten at last with the milk. Form into a loaf, dust with flour or crumbs and dot with butter. Bake in a hot oven at 400° F.

Contrasts

DRAWN BY Madge Geyer

SISTERS—yet what a contrast! Each seeing and enjoying life in her own way. Each secretly thinking the other rather foolish in her choice. I wonder with which one you agree?

It's Father plain, isn't it, which has chosen the wiser course?

A butterfly existence may have thrill after thrill until the butterfly loses her beauty and other butterflies flutter on the scene. Then she is ruthlessly cast aside for the newer, lovelier ones. And regretfully she thinks of her lost opportunities when it's too late.

But her sister who has chosen the harder road is by far happier. For in contrast to the butterfly she has built for herself a home where love and happiness reign supreme. Tiny baby fingers take the place of caressing, flattering hands. Even Pat knows this home is ruled by love, for isn't he considered one of the family? Isn't he the self-appointed guardian of this realm of Love?

Contrasts! Each condemning while secretly envying the other, yet one wouldn't change places for all the riches of the world. For Love lasts—Beauty is fleeting.

Fatherless Babies Cause Problems

By WINFRED BLACK

WELL, right along about now I wonder how the unmarried mother feels about it.

About what? Why, about the whole business—the new baby that's on the way, the people who believe in the schems of raising a family without any man to bother about, the people who don't believe in it, the gossip, the scandal, the doctor's bills and the trained nurses and the hospital, what's going to be the best kindergarten some day, and will it be college or private school?

Dear me, what a lot of worry she's arranging for herself—this woman with the unmarried mother scheme.

You know the one I mean—the one who followed the rich woman's idea in New York; who wanted the baby and didn't want to bother with a husband. You know—the pioneer in the Unmarried Mother Crusade.

SORT of a queen bee and drone proposition, don't you know. The queen bee kills the drone as soon as she feels that his usefulness is over, and then when the right time comes the next year she looks around for a new drone. Isn't that the way of it?

I heard a woman make a speech ten or fifteen years ago, and she said men were useless things anyway. They didn't amount to much, even in carrying on the race. Their duties were very slight. Why not just simply recognize that and treat them as biological necessities, and let it go at that?

I LAUGHED myself into hysterics over the idea, but somehow it doesn't seem to be so much of a joke after all.

Why didn't the rich widow adopt a baby if she wants one so badly?

How does she know what kind of ancestors this particular baby has on his father's side? Or doesn't she care?

What queer creatures they are—these modern women—anyhow.

They all seem to be craving for "experience" and "experience"—and more "experience."

THEY don't seem to mind in the least how they get it. I wonder if the world is really being made over on a new plan. We used to think that you couldn't have your cake and eat it, too, but the modern woman seems to think she can eat her cake and have it—all the pleasure, all the happiness of motherhood, and none of its pain and agony and responsibility—no, not even a husband to worry over.

No impulsive, no generous, self-forgetting dreams. Everything cut and dried and planned. Dear me, what a businesslike world, to be sure! I wonder if we'd really be so awfully happy in it after all?

Dr. Bisch Discusses the Habit of Doubt

By L. E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

AMONG the most devitalizing of character failings is the habit of doubt.

Indecision, not knowing what to think nor which courses to pursue, can become a veritable bugbear to happiness.

There are women who are unable to decide which hat or dress is really becoming and they will visit shop after shop, try on dozens of garments, and then not know what they ought to do.

Such a woman of my acquaintance used to become hysterical whenever she had to go through the ordeal of a purchase, no matter what its kind. After finally buying an article and carrying it home she would again be assailed with so much doubt that it ended in tears. She finally had to be treated for it.

Men are not free from the obsession of doubt either.

There are those who never succeed in business because they are unable to make up their minds. They think and wonder and puzzle until it is too late, until someone else does the thing and gets in ahead of them.

And, strangely enough, individuals of unusually quick decision, those who make so-called "snap judgments," are often those who are really doubting Thomases at heart.

The reason they jump to conclusions so fast and furiously is because they fear to hesitate. They know from experience that if they hesitate doubt will assail and overwhelm them. Hence they do not give themselves time to think.

The French have an expression for the doubting failure and it is called "Folie de doute."

It really means a doubting mania. The expression is used in psychology and often the use of the word mania in this connection is no exaggeration of the facts.

To be sure, there are all degrees of the habit of doubting.

It bothers some only when important matters are at issue. Others doubt only where the question of love or fidelity is involved. Some only are doubtful when it comes to money.

Hundreds, if not thousands, doubt their own ability. This is a kind of inferiority conviction.

There are scores and scores of men and women who doubt whether or not they locked the front door, or turned off the gas in the kitchen range, or whether they put a stamp on the letter just dropped into the mail box—and so it goes on.

There are likewise persons who do not begin to doubt until a question is asked concerning it. Mary Jones, for instance, sees to it that the cat is in the house every night before retiring. She goes through the same experience day after day without wondering afterward at all.

But ask her point blank if she is sure she called the cat and she has no peace until she hunts the cat all over again.

Mild cases of doubt can be cured by the doubters themselves.

This is accomplished by the practice of doing little things quickly and effectively.

If you find yourself hesitating whether to go for a walk or stay at home, choose immediately the course that will make you active. Take a walk if it be but a hundred feet.

In this way you stop doubting because you have actually accomplished something.

When doubt becomes a veritable nightmare it requires special nerve treatment.

To Bob or Not to Bob

By MARIA JERITZA

TO BOB or not to bob, that is the question! And it seems to be a question difficult to decide for many women. Yet the tendency at present is toward longer bobs.

Whether midsummer with its torrid weather will induce the fair ones to shingle the hair close and trim because of the greater coolness of short hair remains to be seen.

Personally, I am inclined to believe that women are thoroughly tired of the monopoly of the shingle, and will endure the inconvenience of shoulder-length tresses, rather than sacrifice them, when the thermometer shoots up to 80 or more in the shade. The longer bob is becoming to almost everyone and admits of far greater individuality of coiffure than did the close shingle.

A woman with naturally curly hair has little difficulty in managing the shoulder-length waves and curls, for she can easily train her hair to distractingly becoming ringlets or set curls, held in place at the nape of her neck by tape and a barrette hair ornament.

Straight hair is a nuisance. The only way out of the problem of a shoulder-length straight bob is a permanent wave. So the question of the hour becomes, "To wave or not to wave," with the vast majority of straight-haired women voting in favor of a permanent wave. If you decide on a permanent, be sure to choose a skillful and conscientious operator, one who understands her business. In her competent hands you should be perfectly safe. She will not even undertake to give you a permanent if your hair is too fine or is dyed in such a way that it will not wave well.

The permanent does not injure the hair. In fact, it cleanses it thoroughly and antiseptically. To hair that is oily as well as to hair that is thin, a permanent wave is a godsend. It adds body and fluffiness to the tresses.

You can, if you explain to the operator the effect you wish to attain, have your permanent administered in such a way that your head will be a mass of up-standing curls, which you can if you wish, bind with a ribbon about the crown of your head, as did the French beauties of the Napoleonic era. Madame Recamier, for instance!

Yes, the shoulder length bob offers boundless opportunities for individual coiffure effects. It is well to remember, however, that the style of head-dressing should go well with the type of dress worn. A head that is a mass of curls bound by a velvet ribbon would look foolish with a mannish tailored suit, but charming with a frilly, feminine frock.

Whether you decide to wear your hair in the knob at the nape of the neck, which is much affected now as a shoulder-length bob, in pigtails as it is and the flappers threaten to do this Summer, or in a severe, boyish hair-cut, give it the best of care. A weekly shampoo with melted castile or liquid green soap, followed by thorough rinsings until all oil and dirt are removed, drying in the sun, daily brushing and scalp massaging, discreet use of a good tonic—oily or non-oily, to meet your individual need—should keep your glory crown thick and lustrous, a shimmer with health and beauty.

The BROADWAY MELODY by JACK LAIT

A Story With a Thousand Thrilling Episodes

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

EDDIE KERNS, song plugger, has written the music for "The Broadway Melody," a big revue, to be produced by the famous Zanfield. For two years Eddie has been engaged to "Hank" Mahoney, and now he sees his way clear to marry her. She and her younger sister, Queenie, are playing in vaudeville. Eddie tells them he has managed to place them in the revue. Eddie discovers he's lost his heart to Queenie. He keeps his secret from "Hank."

When "Hank" arrives home with Eddie she discovers Queenie in bed and is overjoyed to find she really did not go out with "Harry." The latter sends one-half of a $1000 bill to Queenie. "Hank" returns and finds the torn $1000 bill. She's worried about Queenie, who hides her sudden riches. "Harry" makes another attempt to get Queenie to go out with him. Eddie tries to persuade Queenie to have nothing to do with "Harry." He is holding her in his arms when "Hank" comes in. She asks if they have been fighting, and Queenie then leaves the room. "Hank" tells Eddie the plans for a birthday party. On her return Queenie shows a "Hank" a diamond bracelet "Harry" had given to her. The revue opens and wins the approval of the first-nighters.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER 20

EDDIE KERNS knew his trade. He was no more unstrung by the knowledge that this first audience was the most critical and sophisticated the show would ever face and that on its reaction hung his present and future than a race horse is panicked because he is in Derby. He was keyed, pitched strung to a supreme pitch, not alien of all his talents, but of all the minutiae of look and inflection and move which had been trained into him at rehearsals.

"It was his song, "Broadway Melody." He felt it. His heart was hitting in split-beat jazztime

A thrill of pride ran through Hank and Queenie as they stood in the second entrance. There Ed die was "selling" his star song to a crack galaxy of the Big Burg

The concentrated silence and forward leaning of the audience of which they could catch a mo mentary gli..pse, revealed that they were "eating up" the number through the verse, then into the chorus, then into the syncopated repeat of the chorus—the well-known "one and two"—arrange-ment, and then he swung into his soft-shoe footwork. From every direction the chorines pranced on and wove into formations. He backstepped across the stage and made an exit, doffing his derby hat and waving his cane in the other hand.

It was a sensation. The house fell flat to re-enter the seats Zansie had, of course, anticipated that There were to be repeat and re peat choruses, each with a spe cialty team or single. The Ma honey Sisters were tried. An ec centric dancer with long legs fol lowed Eddie on. She tore it wide open with hard bends that looked as though they ought to kill her She was applauded off, and Hank, sitting ahead, with Queenie's hands on Hank's hips behind her tapped to downstage center and executed their neat routine.

As they bowed off they passed Eddis, on the O. P. side, standing by for his re-entrance, the blowoff of the number.

His eyes were straight ahead What he loved most in life was less than a foot away, but he never es- turned an eyeball. A quar ter of character hoofers were com ing on, with the chorus divided to let them through. They picked up the time and were burning up the groundchoks. The girls were tap ping with their hands, snapping fingers and clapping hands, mak ing a sweet and clean-cut tempo to dance against.

As the chorus finished the girls, by magic, poured themselves into a rhomboid, and Eddie Kerns breezed on and formed the apex Everyone was moving and no one was moving much. The chorus, somehow, shifted about and shifted to a fan, then without seeming to change positions at all to a tri angle

Suddenly the stage went black From above and all sides and the spot boxes in the saloony but piercing baby lights that threw fan tastic shadows, which died as a ... of lamposte wattage flooded the stage below and above a trans parency was illuminated from be hind, showing Times Square a night scene, with the girls and Ed die forming the Langorre triangle in the foreground. In the dark second a newsstand had been silently wheeled on and a sound effect made the rumble of a pass ing subway train below, while a traffic cop blew his whistle be hind them at that famous left-hand turn on 46th st., where Broad way and 7th ave. meet.

Opening Night of the Show

Across the back drop miniature taxis with lights and horns were racing every which way. A big red surface car ground its way around the 42nd st. curve. People were rushing in and out of the minaretted kiosk at 43rd st. A moving electric sign flashed on and off on high. The clock on the tall picture theater was lit up and showed the right time (for once).

The audience jumped up and cheered.

Zannie had put it on and over again. He knew his producing and he knew Broadway and he knew his first-nighters.

"Broadway Melody," the show and the song, were "in the bag."

Eddie took seven bende. There was no encore. Nothing could follow that gigantic climax But the orchestra was up in forte now with a mad syncopation of the melody, the brass blaring, the drums rolling, the saxophones moaning weird blues and a shrill clarinet with a falsetto wail top ping all.

Eddie's star song was surely get ting its "plug." The music stores and the department stores would hear from this before noon.

Wringing wet, Eddie threw on a robe and fled up and across stage to make a change. In their room the Mahoney Sisters were stripped and Hank was hustling into a com bination underclothes garment from her toes up. An act "in one" was dealing crossfire dialogue, a moaning weird blues and a shrill s ound for wit and wisdom.

Hank was to come on as a maid in a "black out," with three brief skits which runs three minutes or less, closing as the lights are shut off on the "cracker," the comedy surprise. Thereafter she must hurry back to get the final touches on Queenie for the first half finale the love duet song.

For that Queenie had to whiten herself from head to feet, for the apparel was tiny and flimsy, and the lights upon her, thousands of candle-power, threw up every blemish, every hair. During Inter mission she would wash it all off again, for the whiting sets and cannot conveniently be danced in

A knock at the door caused both girls to step out of sight behind the doorline as Hank asked what was wanted. It was the doorman —he said he had a note for Miss Queenie.

Such an infraction of opening nights rules was extraordinary, even to such unreasoned Broad wayites as the Mahoney Sisters There are stringent regulations forbidding it. Once a telegram was delivered to a star before a pre miere was finished. It told her that her father was dying. She dressed and rushed out of the thea tre before anyone knew it, "and the show was ruined forever But here was a note being handed in. Hank opened a crack of the door and thrust out a bare arm. She hand ed the envelope to Queenie.

"From Warriner, I suppose—he will be well enough and drop enough to get away with murder

It was not from Warriner Queenie knew that. The envelope was plain and cheap and without a superscription, the sort one buys in a drugstore with a blue band around a dozen for a dime. It was addressed in an unfamiliar hand, and in pencil.

Queenie turned her back, slit it open with a nail file and read:

"Queen—Must see you after the finale. Give Hank the slip after Love Duet. Meet me back of moon box near switchboard. Eddie."

"Well, what does the rat want? asked Hank.

"I isn't from Warriner," she answered.

"Oo, oo" Who Dan?"

"Friend of mine—in the troupe."

"Who? Lemme see."

But Queenie was tearing the sheet into a thousand bits.

"What's the big idea?" demanded Hank. "Since when?"

"It was nothing—nothing at all— one of the girls—she wants to talk to me in intermission a second— I think I know what it is—she has a couple o' Johns an' wants a girl to fill in a party—"

"You don't go."

"Who said I was going? But I got to tell her, so she can book one o' the other jennies. She thinks she's doin' me a tail favor."

"Oh, all right . . . by the way, what are you goin' to do after the show tonight?

"I've got a date"

"Warriner?"

Yes . . . but nix me with him . . .

Stewie Worthington will be there with Kitty Biddle. He's givin' Kit a play on a big way. I don't see how any girl can stand the big, beefy stew He—"

"Don't change the subject. How about me? Ain't I in on any of your plans or secrets or anything any more?"

Queenie turned her head a bit and shook it down as she spread the gleaming, milky liquid on her thigh.

"You? You've got Eddie," she said.

"That's all right, too. Eddie likes you. You know you're wel come any place I am an' any place Eddie is, too."

"Three's a crowd"

"That's a flock of sausages. It wasn't a crowd before you met this here Warriner."

"Oh, yes it was. Almost from the first minute we landed in New York. I noticed it—I heard you tell it to Eddie that night when I gave Warry the stand-up an' you an' him came in an' didn't know I was in bed. I couldn't help hearin' it. You said I was actin' strange for days. An' that was the first day I ever saw Frank Warriner. Trump that!"

Hank came over to her.

"Oh, honey," she whined, "Let's you an' me quit raggin'. It seems all we do now days is to toe-to- toe There's somethin' back o' this—that I prob-ly don't know a thing about—an' it scares me numb. What is it, Queenie? Can't you tell me—Hank?"

A choke came up in Queenie's throat. She started to speak, then changed her mind and coughed. Then she said, unconvincingly and unevenly

"Nothin' at all—nothin' to it—nothin' to it—I—everything's doing'll come out right side up—now don' miss your cue, or you'll be out o' the show so quick it'll take three weeks for you to get a postal card from me."

Hank glanced quickly at the clock on the dressing shelf.

"Got plen', she exclaimed. "I better step on it."

"Better step on it," remarked Queenie primly as she wrestled with the crepe garment. "That stage manager is no geranium when he gets back with the time he's had."

"In his hat," snapped Hank. "I ain' goin' to be in show business long anyway . . . I'm goin' to marry Eddie — this show is a hit— "

"Hank!" It's bad luck to say a thing like that on opening night," protested Queenie.

Wins Praise

The quality of her acting as the Private Secretary in "The News Parade" is winning the praise of movie fans everywhere for this lovely newcomer to the screen. At home in New York City, Olive Shea adds to her charming personality and she has fairly set the style" on Broadway by the way she dresses her hair.

"The simple method I use in caring for my hair," says Miss Shea, "has been of great help to me in my modern picture work, where one's hair must always look its best. It's just the thing for busy girls, too, because it is so easy. Most of the girls I know in stage and picture work are taking it up as soon as they hear about it. I always do up my brush every time you use it. It makes your hair so easy to dress and it gives it the wonderful gloss that is so necessary to me letting their hair grow. It keeps my hair soft and fluffy, and it is remarkable, for it never gets a bit oily. It's such a silky, soft, lustrous appearance at all my friends admire."

Lavoris removes the oily film from each strand of hair, restores its natural color, gives it more lustre than brilliantine. It cleanses and invigorates the scalp; helps prevent dandruff, and it is delightfully fragranced; isn't sticky or color doesn't show. Waves, "set" will last much longer. problem of that sort has for me a powerful attraction.

At the inquest no further evidence of importance was forthcoming

When the Air Ministry received the report of the evidence it was decided to secure the assistance of Prof. Tomes. The professor's great oral scientific attainments made him a particularly useful consultant He had, moreover, made that branch of mechanics known as kinetics his special study. But his report did nothing to clear the mystery.

With me Seymour frequently brought up the subject. I could easily conceive that the same method, whatever it was, might have been used in all three cases, but I could not guess at its nature and Seymour seemed equally at a loss. He told me he had given much thought to it

"Did it ever strike you" he said, after one of these discussions "that the essence of mystery lies not in the mysterious thing, but in the person mystified? This is quite evident from the fact that what is most mysterious to one is not at all so to another. That essence is ignorance

"Depend upon it, Fordyce, that when the ignorance that renders the criminal's deeds mysterious is removed, the rope will not be far from his neck. I suspect it may be a job for a scientist rather than a policeman, but not a Tomes—certainly not for a Tomes."

Not long after that his mental state began to be a worry to me.

"It does earn to me that I did not perhaps know the real Seymour at all. Was he harmless or—the reverse?

One afternoon he walked over to Aylmers. "For the sake of exercise," he explained.

One remark of his that afternoon the significance of which I was unable to appreciate at the time, comes back to me now. He suddenly exclaimed in an almost fierce tone, "I am getting nearer," Fordyce. I am getting nearer."

"I am sure your labors deserve to be crowned with complete success, I said.

I was puzzled to see a momentary wave of amusement pass across his feature, a sardonic curl of the lips, relieving, while it lasted, their previous unpleasant expression.

Altogether, at my place or his, I saw Seymour three times during the next fortnight.

It was a few days after the conclusion of this fortnight when a dreadful event occurred at Chennel

Seymour was in London. One night the servants at Chennel were awakened by a terrific explosion in the direction of the laboratory Smoke was issuing from it, illuminated by a flickering red reflection as of a fire within the laboratory itself.

The two building stood quite detached and was built of wood, except for its low brickwork foundations and a small chimney stack

A servant noted that one of the laboratory skylights had been smashed

Who or what on a perfectly calm dark night, had crashed through that roof, remained to be discovered.

A gardener discovered a human body burning inside the laboratory It was in the centre of the doorway, from the door to the other end of the laboratory, close to an iron plate of expanding lattice-work—the entrance to a small railed-in enclosure where Seymour (as he has told, me) stored the radium which he manufactured. A large electric storage battery stood close by and, on the other side of the small enclosure there was an electric furnace. Across the alley, immediately opposite, were two powerful dynamos. Exactly over the small enclosure was one of the roof skylights, a single pane of ribbed glass, known in the glass trade, as I am told, as Hartley's Roll. This was the skylight that was broken

One hand of the corpse was caught in the top of the gate. The body was hanging with its lower half on the ground.

At the inquest Seymour answered the coroner's questions with clarity.

"How do you account, Mr. Seymour, for the man's death?"

"That is quite clear, but it will take a few words to explain. The small enclosure, into which he was, apparently, trying to make his way, lies between a large storage battery and an electric furnace. The wires connecting these, to prevent danger from them in the enclosure, are carried up to the roof, along close under the skylight, and then down. The man, by the light of the torch that has been found, was poking about and ran foul of these wires and brought them down

"One of them evidently fell on the gate on which the man must have had his hand, and he, not knowing the nature of wires, took hold of the other one to lift it out of his way"

"Do you think he was other than a prowling thief?"

"He was evidently prowling," Seymour answered.

The coroner frowned. not regarding the answer as serious

"His clothes are those of a tramp," he said. "How do you account for the fracture of the skylight, Mr. Seymour?"

"That has puzzled me, but I think I have the solution. The electric wires, as I have already said, pass close under the glass There was frost in the night. In consequence of the warmer air of the laboratory there would be much condensation on the glass In this unfortunate affair the wires may have been overloaded for a moment and some of the current may have leaped from it to the frost, and so to the glass. That would turn it instantly to steam and so burst the glass. It is the probable solution"

That ended the examination

On the evening of the same day the evidence was the subject of a conversation at Scotland Yard. It indicates the importance attached to it by the detective forge that Mr. Gibson, the assistant commissioner, head of the Criminal Investigation Department, was himself present. The other three were Chief Inspector Bateson, Inspector Gilmour and Sergeant Stevens. The reason of the interest was that the dead tramp was, in fact, Sanders, a Scotland Yard man.

At the end of the conversation Gibson turned to Bateson.

"What do you make of it all?" he asked.

"That it leaves us much where we were, sir."

Gilmour looked his disagreement.

"Whether he is Seymour or not, the culprit has to be found and taken," said the Assistant Commissioner with energy. "Otherwise we shall be the laughing stock of the country, and of the Paris men as well."

"Why were our men sent to Chennel?" Gibson asked

Bateson turned to Gilmour.

"Because I found out Arnold's late wife, when he married her, was engaged to this Seymour. There is the motive," said the Inspector.

"Her father was a distant cousin of our Arnold and a man of wholly different character. He was an officer in the Indian Army and was killed on the Afghan border His wife was in India at the time, and died not long after getting the news, leaving their only child with no nearer relative than the jewel merchant. His wife, the one he had stolen from Seymour, had no children, and it was at her wish that he grudgingly took the girl into his house. Mrs. Arnold soon became so attached to the child that, at her entreaty, Arnold finally adopted her."

"Well' that's all we need know about that," said Bateson, who was impatient of sentiment.

"Quite so, sir. But I wished you to see that she was not unwilling to talk to me, provided that I kept away from the question I went to ask Glynn asked what Gilmour was doing.

"Working on some idea of his connected with Chennel. He asked for a free hand to do what he could, short of sending down another man there. That I gave him"

Glynn looked seriously at the Chief Inspector.

"Do you know what he has done?" Glynn asked

"What?"

"Gone there himself! Gone for a thousand! May all be well with him!" said Glynn

They stared at each other. The idea had never occurred to Bateson, but he saw at once that Glynn was probably right. He knew how Gilmour had taken his failure to heart, and he knew too that he was a man absolutely devoid of fear.

Love Will Find a Way, Says Miss Fairfax

By Beatrice Fairfax
An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

NO two love problems are identical. For this reason it is impossible to lay down any rule of love and marriage which will work out successfully in all cases. All I can do, at best, is give suggestions which may help if they appeal to your own judgment as applicable to your own problem.

It is generally acknowledged, for instance, that an extreme difference in ages makes marriage unwise. Difference in religion often proves an obstacle to success and happiness in marriage. Good health of both partners might be cited as essential to their happiness together.

Yet here is a letter telling of a marriage which is seemingly an exception to all the general rules for marital happiness to which I have referred:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"Both my husband and I read your column. Recently you advised a girl of 18 not to marry a man of 35 because of the difference in their ages. My husband joked me about that, as I told him I would write to you concerning our case.

"I don't know whether a girl of 20 knows more than a girl of 18 or not. At any rate, I was 20 and my husband was 40 when we were married.

"We don't have spats and quarrels like most couples do. We have one boy five years of age and we all three get along just fine. We have heard of several couples like ourselves

"I have heard that men under 40 don't understand women and their work. My husband helps me around the house as though he were an other woman. He looks young and has been taken for 28. He acts young, too, and we both enjoy dancing and things like that.

"The only thing that worries me is that he doesn't believe in religion and I do. I am a church member. But we don't quarrel about it. I didn't worry about his age when I married him because I knew he would be good to me and what I didn't know, he would at his age.

"We had hard luck, too, during the first two or three years of our marriage. My husband had rheumatism and broken arches and such things, so we were down to our last penny many times. I was too inexperienced to be able to help him by going out and earning money. I forgot to tell you, we are of different nationalities, although both were born in Europe. I feel that I am very, very lucky and hope my letter may help others with their problems

"MARIE."

Twenty years difference in ages between the two, difference in religion and nationality, ill health and poverty, yet Marie and her husband and their five-year-old son are happy together and consider themselves most fortunate! I gather from the letter that of late years the poverty and illness have been overcome

Thank you for your letter, Marie. I have printed it for three reasons first, to illustrate the fact that there are exceptions to all rules; second, because it is inspiring to love-lorn girls to read now and then about successful, triumphant love, pointing to the fact that what one has accomplished others can if they will "carry on" courageously; third, because in my opinion, Marie's letter reveals a trait of disposition and character on the part of herself and her family which is the secret of the success and happiness of their marriage; they are grateful for their love and rejoice in it.

Many a wife who has gone through less of hard luck and misfortune than Marie, writes me bewailing her fate and pitying herself with all her heart. But Marie and her husband, when threatened with illness and poverty, considered themselves lucky to have each other to love. They differ on the important question of religion, but they are kindly and happy in their love, and they do not "spat and quarrel."

I would not advise the average girl to marry a man 20 years her senior, of a different religion and nationality. But there are exceptions to all rules. The great thing is to find love that is deep, our genuine love, unselfish and true. Undoubtedly, in such a case where two individuals of lovely disposition and with capacity for whole-souled, unselfish affection meet and love each other, neither age nor illness nor want can kill their mutual joy. For theirs is real love, the love that always "finds a way!"

AUCTION BRIDGE

by WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD

The World's Greatest Authority

ORIGINAL ONE MAJOR BID DEVELOPED THROUGH FORCING TAKE-OUT, ASSIST AND REBID.

Auction Bidding.

SOUTH, lacking the high-card strength requisite for an original bid, passes. West, holding two quick tricks and the probability of five with Spades as trump, bids one Spade. North passing, East has the choice of two sound bids, one No Trump or two Clubs, the No Trump preferred to Clubs because of its greater game probability.

Contract Bidding.

South passing, West bids one Spade showing 4 Probable Tricks inclusive of at least 2 Quick Tricks. North passing, East makes a forcing bid of three Clubs showing a strong hand containing at least five Probable Tricks, together with a further bid in hand, its natural dependent upon partner's response. South passing, West bids four Clubs, showing five supporting tricks. North passing, East bids six Clubs showing six probable tricks, two more than shown by his previous bid. This concludes the bidding

The Play at Auction.

South opens the 10 of Diamonds, the top of the intermediate sequence in his long suit. The Diamond Jack holding the trick, East counts the positive tricks in his hand as 6 Clubs, 2 Hearts, 2 Diamonds and 2 Spades, a total of 12 provided he drives out the Ace of Spades before losing six remaining stoppers in Diamonds.

The Play at Contract.

South's opening lead was the choice of several evils. Not wishing to lead Spades or Clubs nor to lead away from the King of Diamonds, he opened the top of his worthless tripleton.

The play at Contract proceeded practically as outlined above at Auction play. East losing but the Ace of Spades.

It would be extremely difficult to arrive at a Slam contract at No Trump but was comparatively simple at suit bidding, as distributional values, such as long-card tricks, are more clearly shown at suit bidding than at No Trump and ability to ruff is not a factor in No Trump bidding.

Tomorrow's article will show the development of a Minor one bid at Contract through a forcing takeout.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your bridge problems. Write him, care of this paper enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

A book is prepared in which are written such answers as, "Certainly not," "Many thanks," "Why, of course," "I never dance," "Some other time," "If you insist upon it," "With pleasure," "No, thank you," etc. This book and a paper knife are handed to a lady. Several gentlemen are then presented successively to her, and each one asks her to dance with him. She hands him the paper knife, which he inserts at random between the leaves of the book, and there finds his answer. When a partner is accepted the book and knife are handed to another lady.

MERELY THE BAER FACTS

FIRST official spasms of Congress will be an effort to find some antiseptic substitute for presidential handshaking.

We pay our head man 75 grand per session, and we don't want him to waste his fiscal years in congratulatory gymnastics.

In addition to the financial evaporation of official time there is a physical deficit due to the tourists' ambition to shake the hand that shook the hand of Andy Mellon.

No man can shake 1700 hands a day and get anything accomplished except shaking hands.

Therefore, it is up to the Republic to safeguard the digital health of the nation's leading executive

They say that first thoughts are the soonest. If this mitt grabbing is to continue, we advise Mr Hoover to wear on his right hand a glove made of the purest porcupine fur.

With the needles on the outside.

If this curative prescription is too drastic for a mild administration, the next best thing is the system used by drivers of mail trucks when turning corners.

Have a wooden arm and hand on the corner of the presidential desk. When a tourist steps up the President yanks a string and the wooden hand extends a rough pine greeting.

A third system of calisthenics is the mandarin welcome. When two rich Mongolian chess players meet, each one bows and shakes hands with himself.

When you shake hands with yourself you know that you are meeting a friend. It is not only a satisfactory method of welcoming the departing stranger, but also satiates the universal urge of personal vanity.

The Wahsdoobie of the junior African jungles rub noses when they meet. This would be an unequal contest in some instances.

The writer has a nose that would rub his opponent right off the slate.

But the rubbing greeting saves the hands even though it is tough on the nose.

The practice of shaking hands means nothing. We remember that Dempsey and Firpo shook hands just before Firpo knocked Dempsey for a twister and Jack flattened Luis like a wet bath mat.

It is impossible to break this established habit of indorsing mitts, then it is up to Congress to appoint a capable referee for tourist inquisons who can compel the transient inspectors to shake and then break clean.

Not only did the fireproof wrapping survive, but the ordinary paper inside was not even scorched.

LOVES OF STAGE BEAUTIES

By RUTH MORRIS.

THE place that Ada Rehan attained in the theater may be said to equal the niche of a Wolfington or a Jordan or a Clive. But her fame was deserved—no actress ever worked more faithfully or, at first, with so little return as Ada Rehan. But, despite discouragement, she was faithful to her profession and helped to write one of the most brilliant chapters in the development of the American theater.

Rehan was born in Limerick, Ireland, but America may well lay claim to her, for she was brought to these shores in 1865, when she was 10 years old. The family settled in Brooklyn. Two older sisters were led by chance to theatrical careers, and it was equally accidental that Ada was led to the stage. She filled the vacancy of a small part one night in her sister Katherine's theatrical company and deported herself with such poise and ability that her family decided on a theatrical career for her.

This was in 1872. Six years later Augustin Daly engaged her as leading woman in his famous theatrical company, which included John Drew, then a handsome matinee idol, and other aristocrats of the American stage. But those intervening six years were far from being ones of easy attainment. Recognition did not come to Rehan overnight. On the contrary, it seemed to her that she never would emerge from obscurity: that she would spend the rest of her days enacting minor parts. But she was not discouraged and gave faithful attention to every part assigned.

Various stock companies, including that of Mrs. John Drew, in Philadelphia, provided the medium of her apprenticeship. So well did she learn her trade that the most exacting manager America had ever known took her out of obscurity to be leading lady at Daly's Theater when he organized his historic repertory company.

Rehan remained with Daly until the latter's death in 1899. Many rival managements tried to win her away from the organization, but she was loyal to the man who had given her her first real chance. Several times, in fact, she refused offers of stardom to remain as an ordinary member of the Daly company.

Forrest Izard, interesting historian of the stage, has described Rehan as "Regal in stature, opulent in bodily beauty, gracious and rich in nature." Similar to Ellen Terry, "ordinary beauty paled beside her." She was mistress of every nuance of comedy—from broad farce to the most brilliant "high comedy." Her infectious good humor and geniality made her a subject of adoration on and off the stage and off. There were no petty meanness about Rehan; she could see and admire talent in rival actresses; she was loyal, and she was kind—with a heart as big as all the world.

There are those living today who rhapsodize over memories of her performances in "The Taming of the Shrew" and other Shakesperian roles. Clippings from the press of that day bear out the superlatives—not only in America, but in England, for Daly, soon after his success in this country, took his company for a yearly engagement abroad.

Rehan, who had been rather retiring in this country, blossomed out in the social life of London. She was feted and lionized there in the manner of West End London today with visiting American stars.

The six years of hard, unrelenting drudgery were well repaid by the adulation poured upon her as the English public became acquainted with the charm of her Rosalind, her Beatrice and above all, her vixenish Katherine.

Bernard Shaw, then a dramatic critic for a London daily paper, wrote: "Her voice, compared to Bernhardt's 'voix d'or,' has all the sounds of the woodland compared to the clinking of 20-franc pieces—it is delightful after the mechanical intoning of Sarah Bernhardt."

Daly's death marked the beginning of the end for Rehan. Her appearances became more and more infrequent—and finally, in less than half a dozen years she had ceased to act at all. But many an actress today would be willing to be sentenced to her deeds, to enjoy, for one-tenth of the time, her resplendent glory.

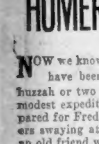
By NICHOLAS YOUNG

NOW we know who gave "Three Cheers" its name. It must have been donated by Fred Stone himself shouting a huzzah or two over the returns. Mr. Dillingham's none too modest expedition into musical extravaganza, originally prepared for Fred Stone, arrived at the Colonial with Will Rogers swaying at the footlights in the role of pinch-hitter for an old friend with a cracked ankle. Mr. Rogers almost turned the show into a one-man drama. There are those who will insist he did exactly that; more open-minded folk will say that Mr. Dillingham at least set up a smart production for the thing is certain.—Will Rogers saved the show. And it was well worth saving.



Nicholas Young

If anyone still retains any momentary doubt of Mr. Rogers' ability to make musical comedy sit up and look pretty, may we hastily counsel strict attention upon "Three Cheers." There was an abundance of scenic splendor to catch the eye; fetching color Tiller girls amazed you with bewildering dances, and there were principals, major and minor, handled zealously in pleasant scenes. Still the cheers were lifted for Rogers. This philosopher on the public deeds of the great and near great stood gaining and delighted as the big audience roared its welcome.

Of course, there was more to "Three Cheers" than Will Rogers, but it apparently escaped notice. Mr. Stone's graceful daughter, Dorothy, contributed the beauty and charm that Mr. Rogers omitted from his part of the proceedings. They were a joyous pair. Miss Stone's dance numbers recalled other days, when she drove her talented daddy through swift paces.

"Three Cheers" would be checked off as conventional musical comedy except for Will Rogers. Opening choruses stated each new scene; the love of a man for a maid took its regular turn in the story, and silver-throated songbirds offered their various wares. All this in the regular routine order of the established musical play. There were moments of gentle amusement quite apart from Mr. Rogers and his chats across the footlights.

Andrew Tombes, as a voluble movie director, was his own merry self: Alan Edwards, tall, dark and romantic, acted a little and sang more, while Oscar Ragland, one of Mr. Dillingham's venerable stalwarts, gained a busy evening trying to keep Mr. Rogers within the limits of the author's story.

"Three Cheers," taken in broad view, is chiefly musical comedy completely surrounded by Will Rogers.

Symphony Property Man Is Honored

At the Symphony Orchestra rehearsal in Symphony hall, honor was given Neil J. Peterson, the baggage property man of the orchestra for the last 40 years. It was his birthday and he was summoned to the stage by Serge Koussevitzky.

Week's Features

GLOBE—"Conquest," with H. B Warner, and "Lady of the Pavements"; starring Thursday, "Wild Orchids," with Greta Garbo, and "Geraldine."

CASINO—"Conquest," with H. B. Warner, and "Lady of the Pavements"; starting Thursday, "The Greyhound Limited," with Edna Murphy, and "Geraldine."

HOWARD—(Burlesque)—"Girls of the U. S. A." with Norma Noel.

BOWDOIN—"Checker Girls," a musical comedy. The film program includes "The Crash," and "Children of the Ritz."

OLD FAVORITES AT ORPHEUM

Leatrice Joy, Betty Bronson, Edward Nugent, Kenneth Thompson and other screen favorites are seen and heard in "The Bellamy Trial," a thrilling, murder mystery film, which is presented with talking sequences at Loew's Orpheum Theater this week.

Monta Bell, director, keeps up the dramatic interest to the end, where a surprising climax reveals the identity of the real murderer.

Murray Gordon and Jimmy Walker, assisted by Francine, delight with a humorous skit entitled "Go Ahead and Shoot." Freshmen and Co-eds, a versatile group of singers and dancers, offer a miniature musical comedy. Mack Gordon and Blanche and Fred Stegar head the talented cast. John R. Walsh, lyric baritone, and Julius Fuerst, daring acrobat, are other entertainers on this week's big program.

Ark's Beauty

STAR OF BIG SHOW

Dolores Costello, sweet and alluring star of the spectacular film production, "Noah's Ark," shown for the first time in Boston at the Majestic Theater before a large audience.

B. & M. LOSING COMMUTERS

So deeply has automobile commuting eaten into the railroad commuting system that the Boston & Maine Railroad has reported a decline of 381,759 single-fare riders and commuters in January and February from the total of the two months in 1928.

In January these riders declined 86,938 and revenue from them was $77,220 less. In February the drop in local single-fare riders was 84,803 and in revenue $58,524, or 3.14 per cent below February, 1928.

From 1920 to 1928 the Boston & Maine lost 11,093,213 passengers, chiefly because of the increase in automobiles, and for the first quarter of the present year there has been a decline of 3.8 per cent in the travel in and out of the North Station as compared with the same period in 1928.

Check Up on Lights

Hundreds of automobilists were held up by officers of the State constabulary on highways throughout the State in a round-up of autos with defective lights.

'NOAH'S ARK' IS TRIUMPHANT SPECTACLE

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Ark angel honors to Dolores Costello were borne on the wings of the same motion picture wind that set Warner Bros. on a pinnacle of credit for their latest production, presented for the first time in Boston at the Majestic Theater, last night.

It's an ill wind that blows nobody good, they say. So the same tempest that wrought destruction upon a film Sodom and Gomorrah, blew fortune the way of a number of persons—with more fortune to come, apparently, in the shape of shekels paid for seeing this splendid picturing of the Great Flood.

This is a spectacle in truth, this "Noah's Ark," stupendous and impressive in its turning back the pages of time forty centuries and more.

THRILLS AND CHILLS

Out of the Bible story as the warp, and the film creator's imagination as the woof, is constructed the latter half of the two-hour show. It differs enough to the Scriptural account to make one balk here to demur to read; and even to reckon up that the Flood came 1656 years after the creation of the world, which would put the time of the drama as just 4277 years ago by the Bible chronology.

What happens, and how, after the screen portrayal, give you an abundance of thrills and chills, of pageantry and passion, which more than satisfy after the unfolding of a plot woven out of the grimness of a train wreck and the World War.

Briefly, the film opens with fine close-ups of the interior of a train crowded with folk bound out of Paris for Constantinople and waystations. In this turmoil of humanity, frenzied over the impending conflict of the nations, are introduced the leading characters Miss Costello, as a voupper and a German: George O'Brien, as an American youth; Guinn Williams as his pal, Al Ross Beery, as the villain, a Russian secret service man, and Paul McAllister, as the clergyman.

EFFECTIVE FINISH

The train plunges into a gorge. O'Brien rescues the girl who is later arrested as a spy through the machinations of the bad Noah Beery—bad as contrasted with the good Noah of the Ark. Miss Costello is to suffer the fate of Mata Hari, but in the nick of time she is saved by the clergyman, who has just offered her spiritual consolation, draws his moral of the "deluge of blood" in the world strife, by comparing it to the deluge of waters ages and ages ago.

Then the film steps a noble stride, setting before us the life of the dwellers in the wicked cities of the plain, and the piety of Noah and his sons. By clever tricks of the trade, marvelous effects are achieved. The Flood spectacle is a grandly effective finish to the film.

And Miss Costello rightly deserves addition to her reputation as "Everybody's Sweetheart" among film fans. Her h w title can now be "Sweet Angel of the Ark."

Want Cop Removed

Following a spirited debate members of the Everett common council voted to request Chief Inspector William E. Hill of Everett to remove the police officer stationed inside the council chamber at the Everett city hall during the meetings of that body.

LITA CHAPLIN STARS AT KEITH MEMORIAL

Out of the movie past nd into the present of vaudeville comes Lita Grey Chaplin, ex-wife of Clown King Charlie, as headliner this week at the Keith Memorial Theater. Lita relies upon for more than her reputation as Charlie 's p lit's wife. She has a magnetic stage presence, a voice both pleasing and expressive, and a dancing style to poise, which is a charming foil for her youth and warm beauty. She won well-deserved encores. Roy Cummings, who can wreck stage scenery more comically than anyone we know, brings a new act and a new and lisome blonde. We would rather see Roy bring down the curtain, in his acrobatic manner, than see many comedians stand on both feet. Miss Roberts is a pretty accompanist to his antics.

James Turray

Art Landry and his Victor Recording Orchestra provided infectious jazz and set the house foot-tapping and clapping for numerous extra numbers. Rudell and Edward Dunigan in a gay skit defied the Jones law and brought down the house.

Joseph E. Howard sang his own songs most ingratiatingly. A beautious alleged ancestress of the human race billed as La Reno Pola, the Simian Dancer, performs monkey dances in the most fashionable human manner, assisted by a jungle band and an agile brunette named Kiki.

The feature picture, "The Shakedown," presents James Murray in the role of a fake boxer, who wins a fight in spite of the racket. A small, tough, freckled and talented boy named Jack Hanlon reforms him on the eve of a fixed match. Barbara Kent contributes uplift and inspiration to Murray's crooked character and makes him a champion in spite of himself.

A popular feature is the daily matinee appearance of "Big Brother" Bob Emery and his band, known to radio fans as the "Joy Spreaders." An addition to the feature is the model airplane circus, with planes flown by Arthur Horn.

Name Playground After John W. Weeks

In honor of former Secretary of War John W. Weeks the Newton board of aldermen voted to name the West Newton playground the John W. Weeks playground. Sinclair Weeks, son of the late cabinet member, and president of the board, presided.

Continuing Shows

WILBUR—Mitzi in "Lovely Lady" moves from the Shubert to the Wilbur. Musical farce.

PLYMOUTH — Dorothy Gish in "Young Love." A good deal of bold talk and direct action by two young lovers.

COPLEY—"The Ringer," a mystery comedy by Edgar Wallace. Mr. Clive appears in the role of an amusing and persistent detective.

APOLLO—"Luckee Girl," a musical farce. Love never did run smoothly, even when set to good tunes.

TREMONT—"The Silver Swan," an operetta. Made exceedingly attractive by pleasant melodies and a good story.

HOLLIS—Grant Mitchell in "All The King's Men." Uninteresting speculation on the real depth of fatherly love.

BEVY OF STARS AT GAYETY

An aggregation of pretty girls, clever comedians and specialists in song, dance and story, featured

Gladys Lockwood

"Sporty Widows" are in bloom at the Gayety, Billy Foster's show was the featured comedian and he lived up to his reputation of a disposer of wisecracks. Fred Bailey, juggler and dancer, was first assistant to Fields, while Mary Sidney, leading man, acted as a foil for both. Three mixed it up in a whole series of scenes, and their comedy caught on with the audience.

But the feminine world was not overlooked when the production was being gathered together. Esther Lang, Marie Arnold, Mildred Burnette and Mamie Sloan headed the stars, but they were not alone. The chorus was excellent. Among the features is the work of Gladys Lockwood.

A special midnight show will be given Thursday night, as part of the Patriots' Day celebration. At that show there will be a number of special features.

JOHN GILBERT HIT IN 'DESERT NIGHTS'

Bearded or beardless, John Gilbert merits stardom. Unbearded, he has time and again appealed to the millions of motion picture patrons; and now with whiskers, and long ones at that, he gets a seal of approval in his acting of a role that eclipses his handsome face. In "Desert Nights," his splendid performer is again a great actor of the films That he is where he is, is explained by the large audiences that packed Loew's State Theater to see the first run of this photoplay in this city. That he, and those playing with him, have again chalked up another big success, is further proved by the 100 per cent quality of the production's reception.

It is a Metro-Gold-wyn-Mayer film, with sound, superbly done. The desert dawn scene itself is worth the money. Add to that a gripping tale of the African out-of-doors, with living scenes that thrill, and the story is more fully told.

Lost a good piece of real estate, buy it wisely, pay for it, keep it, and later it will keep you. See the sound values being today in the real estate columns of the Classified Ads.

'GODLESS GIRL' HAS PLENTY OF THRILLS

Realism was the star to which Cecil B. De Mille hitched his wagon in the making of the "Godless Girl," and so faithfully did he follow his fetish that the picture makes the unreal seem real. Let the deft De Mille fingers but get a grip and he carries one along by the sheer skill of his technique. The photoplay is produced for the first time in Boston at the Keith-Albee this week. If the taste be for thrills this film has it. Flaming youth is at its lustiest here and it is fortunate that the producer does not try to drive it home that young people in real life do such things and disbelieve such things.

Lina Basquette

He has taken the worst, not as a type, not as a black marker of what modern youth is, and purely to give him the chance to put over catastrophe after calamity, and calamity after catastrophe, to Mob scene, fight scene, prison scenes, fire scenes crowd upon each other's heels so fast do they follow.

On the stage there is plenty of pep in the good work by Swor and Goode, Libby's Girls in a West Point feature, Gaile Darling, Frank Marino and Tony Martin, the Uessems and other features.

Didn't Know When to Quit

That's the Trouble With Some Humans

BRINGING HOME THE TWO-TOED SLOTH

This photograph was taken by the Crane Pacific Expedition, sent to discover strange things for the admirable museum that Marshall Field gave to the city of Chicago.

You see Karl Schmidt, a member of the expedition, returning to camp bringing a strange creature, the two-toed sloth, hanging from a pole.

The sloths, a numerous family, slow in motion, walk with great difficulty on the ground, live up in the trees, crawling from limb to limb, and, strangest of all, throughout their lives THEY HANG HEAD DOWNWARD, as you see this sloth hanging to Mr. Schmidt's pole.

What happened to this sloth later we don't know. Probably he was killed, and stuffed, to adorn, still head down, an artificial tree branch in the Field Museum.

From this listless sloth we human beings may learn TO DROP A THING WHEN DROPPING IT IS WISE.

Many go through life hanging, as it were, head downward, never letting go, never making a desirable change.

If this sloth had known enough TO LET GO, drop the pole, scuttle as best he could into the bushes, he might be free in his happy Pacific home.

Some of US, if we knew enough to let go of that which we now hold, and try something better, would find a life more worth while.

On the other hand, the wise thing for the man who is really of the sloth type is to HANG ON. If he let go he might be worse off than he is. The thing to do is to know WHEN to hold on, and WHEN to let go.

No two-toed sloth ever knew that, and many men never know it.

For one man that makes a failure in life because he holds on too long, half a dozen, perhaps, make fifty or a hundred failures, because they NEVER HOLD ON LONG ENOUGH.

Echo Answers "Why?"

Noise Over Leviathan's Liquor; Silence Over a Wanton Killing in Illinois

Why all this noise in the ranks of the Prohibition forces over the decision of the United States Shipping Board to permit the sale of liquor on the Leviathan on the high seas?

Why all this silence in the ranks of the Prohibition forces over the wantonly lawless and wholly senseless killing of Mrs. DeKing in her home in Illinois?

The Constitution follows the flag on the sea, assert the Prohibition propagandists, and the Leviathan's passengers must be protected against the influence of liquor at all costs.

The Constitution follows the flag even closer on land, but neither the Constitution nor the flag protected the life of that honest, God-fearing wife and mother whose home was invaded under the cover of fraudulent search warrants and whose life was taken in sacrifice to the fanatical zeal of brutal Prohibition advocates.

Is all this uproar in the Prohibition camp over the Leviathan's liquor, all these calls to arms, intended chiefly to divert public attention from the horror of that murder under a mask of law in that midland American home?

Why should they invoke the Constitution with such fervent piety now, when they sat silent with averted eyes while a most vital provision of that Constitution was flouted and trampled on in their name only a few days ago?

Why Europe Laughs

They Lend Us OUR Money

Little speculators that have seen imaginary profits and themselves wiped out will be interested in this picture of the money situation.

Gigantic sums are lent in Wall street at 10, 15 and 20 per cent by FOREIGN lenders.

Thus, some of the billions that this country lent to Europe at low interest rates, much of which it never will get back, are now lent here in Wall street at usurious rates.

That causes foreigners THAT are able to borrow money in their own markets at 4½ per cent, and less, to smile at the queer things Americans do. We're an easy mark people.

The "Common" Soldier

Britain Will Give Him a Chance

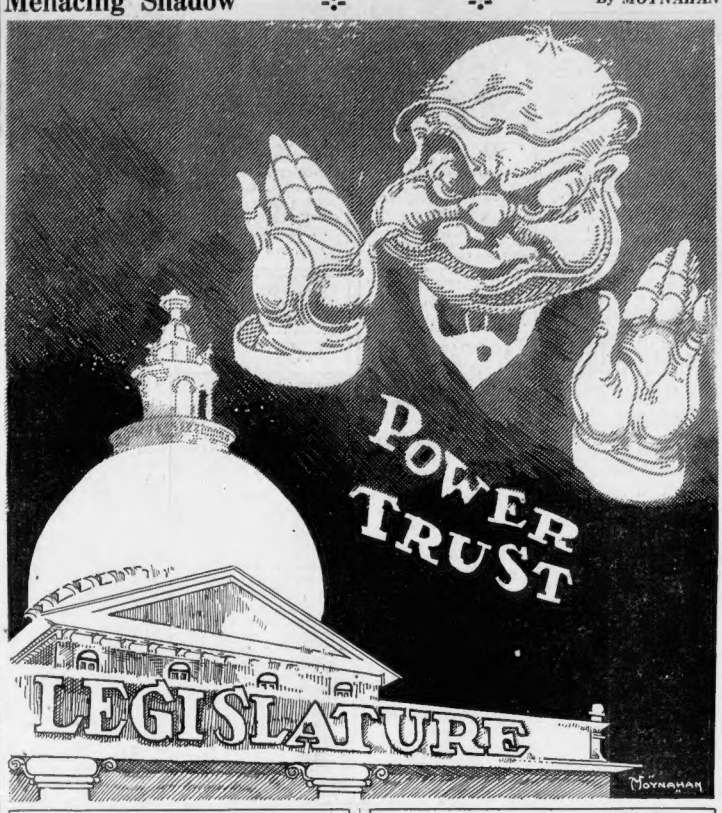
The British General Staff plans to give even the commonest kind of a common soldier a chance to attain any rank in the army.

Napoleon's saying that the simple soldier carried a marshal's baton in his knapsack is to be made a reality in Britain, if the common soldier can rise to the occasion. If he has the ability "Tommy Atkins" may become a [illegible].

This country gives as poor a chance of advancement to the common everyday soldier as any. Perhaps a way will be found to change that.

Menacing Shadow

By MOYNAHAN



Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

A little matchmaker is a dangerous thing. Matchmakers are always trouble-makers.

You never can tell by appearances just what sort of mate would make any man or woman happy. Half the world simply can't understand how the other half endures its "better half."

Why, for instance, do the most interesting and atractive people so often seem to draw such perfect blanks in the marriage lottery? Why do the pasches always seem to pick prunes in the garden of love?

Why do the most strikingly brilliant men so often choose either brainless little butterflies or little gray moths for wives?

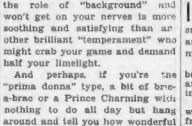
Why do the most beautiful and intelligent women so often marry lightweights or playboys or colorless, drab little "annexes"?

I'll tell you why! Because that's what they WANT! And after all, the secret of a happy marriage doesn't consist in getting a perfect husband or an ideal wife, but in getting the one that is perfect fit for your temperament and an ideal match for your tastes. Your OWN ideal!

If you are a high-strung, brilliant person, with a lot of temperament and luxurious tastes, perhaps a little gray moth who will play the role of "background" and won't get on your nerves is more soothing and satisfying than another brilliant "temperament" who might grab your game and demand half your limelight.

And perhaps, if you're the "prima donna" type, a bit of brawn-a-brac or a Prince Charming with nothing to do all day but hang around and tell you how wonderful you are is more inspiring than a good provider or a human dynamo.

Perhaps the mousy little women who are married to bullies and tyrants, and the placid women who are married to thunderstorms and grouchies are only too delighted to have somebody to infuse a little excitement into their lives. Perhaps they would rather be browbeaten than bored.



And doubtless the henpecked husbands and overworked wives enjoy being henpecked and overworked—or they wouldn't submit to it.

Lots of people would be perfectly satisfied with what they have married, if the rest of the world only LET them!

After all, a husband or a wife is a personal matter, and the only thing important about a lifetime mate is that he or she happens to be the one you WANT!

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I GREW sick of the city. It seeped into my mind like a thick, sour smoke. I could not think clearly any more, so I came up here to the mountains.

I am in a little mining town, far back in the mountains. The pines and the chamiso brush come down into the backyards.

The clear, blue-white water which runs before the door is freshly melted from the snows.

At morning and evening the quail call. Their plump brown bodies rise with a soft thunder as one goes through the woods.

There is always the pungent, fresh smell of cedar and pine and mountains coming and going through the streets.

One feels it coming and going through the lives of the people, too.

People live here as people should live.

They live calmly, with dignity and courtesy.

They find importance and interest in the simplest matters.

They take all that can be taken out of each small, passing experience. They get much more out of life than city people. They are not confused by the smoke and stench of city thinking.

They have little money, but they do not allow this to distress them. They see, quite clearly, that leisure and independence are much more valuable than money. They inhabit their faded cloches and shabby houses with content and without apology, as those who have made the better bargain.

It is quiet here, enormously quiet, with the stillness which lies between the stars.

At night the stars are very close. They are not dull little points of light plastered on a dark blue ceiling. They are radiant worlds.

The lights of cities are a feverish phosphorescence, but the stars are real.

I look at the stars, and the reality of life comes back to me.

In the enormous silence I hear little sounds I have not heard for a long time; healthy sounds which are a part of life.

I hear the sound of the blood in my own ears.

I hear the dropping of pine needles on the forest floor.

I hear the thin, quavering yap of a coyote, four miles away.

And in the distance, the slow, sleepy sounds of the village putting itself to bed.

And deep in my heart, where for a long time there has been such confusion that I could not hear anything at all, I now hear other voices.

I hear the voice of the Faith which I had as a little child. It is easy to have Faith here beneath the mystery and majesty of the stars. If they can be, all things are possible.

I hear the voice of Hope. Surely that Source which made and keeps this vast and teeming beauty has the strength to heal and help a tired soul.

I hear the voice of Love—that gentle, generous love I knew before the cities poisoned me. That love which is a part of this clean Consciousness which spreads beneath the stars.

The stars are very close.

The little night sounds rise and fall—then there is peace.

Such peace as lay upon the world that Seventh day.

Each in its separate place, the great stars stand on guard.

Now I will rest. This is my Father's home.

Wise Sayings

The first and best victory is to conquer self; to be conquered by self is, of all things, the most shameful and vile.—Plato.

Knowledge is essential to conquest; only according to our ignorance are we helpless. Thought creates character. Character condominate conditions. Will creates circumstances and environment.
—Besant.

The highest compact we can make with our fellow is, let there be truth between us forever more.
—Emerson.

I live on the sunny side of the street; shady folks live on the other. I have always preferred the sunshine and have tried to put other people there, if only for an hour or two at a time.—Wilder.

There are whole worlds of fact waiting to be discovered by inference.—Wilson.

The love of history seems inseparable from human nature because it seems inseparable from self-love.
—St. John.

Fire is everywhere; it enfolds all nature; it brings forth, renews, divides, unites, nourishes all things.

New York Day by Day

by O.O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, April 16—One little reason is completely overlooked in figuring out the why of Broadway's theatrical slump. And that is the reign of theatrical diversion in the home. Many fashionable dinner parties are followed by a program of professional entertainers.

Broadway is dotted with upstairs agencies providing: "Entertainers for every occasion." Many stars of the dramatic, musical comedy and vaudeville stage are procurable and for "a consideration" will remain to mingle with guests. Entire chorus numbers may also be presented.

Paul Whiteman, Ben Bernie or Vincent Lopez—in person—with their bands are on tap for those with the price. So instead of rushing through a dinner and stemming the tides to and from the play, the Rialto may be brought to the family fireside.

Favorite night club entertainers pick up heavy extra money appearing at private functions between regular turns on the dance floor. Tommy Lyman, who whispers his "torch" songs at cafe table edges, is said to double his stipend at select drawing room soirees.

Helen Morgan, Harry Richman and other headliners accept private engagements for something in the neighborhood of a "grand"—which to old-fashioned fossils is one thousand fish. Chevalier was recently paid $3000 for three songs at a Vanderbilt home.

One of the popular entertainers is a Hindu with an amazing series of evanishments. He charges $75 an hour and has a sly method of teasing audiences into asking for more, whooping the bill to several hundred dollars while the host or hostess features a sickly grin.

The most spectacular of the home entertainments was in a mansion in the Snooty Sixties which houses an intimate little theater. Special scenery was installed and a midnight performance was presented of a reigning drama by the original cast.

NO city is quite so biddable as New York. It rarely resents restrictions, but obeys dumbly in the manner of sheep. Whalenization of traffic was an example. The regulations became more of a frolicsome adventure than a burden. No resentment was apparent. Indeed, people were more pleasant obeying orders than were the police issuing them. At the big movie houses and opera, the patient lines coiling around the blocks move in snail-like precision without a grumble. Those who pay $10.50 for a theater seat and arrive late make no objection to standing during the first act, if that is a rule.

FEW forms of thievery are so overlooked as the piracy of Tin Pan Alley. Its amiable brigands jest about their pillaging in cafes and theater foyers. There are, of course, composers who depend solely upon their own talent, but they are scarce. It is in the main a ghoulish business that plucks fame from the heritage of its illustrious dead. A few bars from Schubert—he left an estate of $10—no debt one of the rag-time kings a half-million in two years.

A PATENT leather flourish in pool halls—pur-dun, billiard academics—is noted in a stretch of the smart section on Lexington ave. It has six ivory white tables with attendants in full dress, ovs to white gloves, and its walls are hung with a few Corots and Rembrandts. A table is $6 an hour. And to those of us whose billiard experience was gained with Jay Price at Shorty's—2½ cents a cue—the price seems to be what grandpa called "hellmighty steep."

AT an auspicious theatrical first night recently one of the humming bird debutantes who hums from aisle to aisle between acts waited for a dark and tense moment to whisper throatily: "Heaven, I left my pedrls in the car!" And many of us haven't felt so much like that since the last trip to Bermuda.

FROM the London Observer: "In numerable New Yorkers classed as smart go to the theater in formal dress."

But, to slip over a beatitude, we are often very noble in our uncouth simplicity. We do not give foreign players "the bird."

Freak in the Universe

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

"IT is generally advanced as a reason for a limited universe that the heavens are not a blaze of light. May it not be that light suffers a partial extinction in space?

"Jeans, in his 'Cosmogony and Astronomy,' says that rotation alone could never have caused the sun to slough off planets only the near approach of another star within two or three radii of the sun, accompanied by tides, could have done it. He says that the likelihood of this happening to a star is almost nil, and so a star with planets is a freak in the universe. Is this the general consensus of astronomers?—Nelse Lustrom."

IN the first place, the universe of stars might be infinite and yet the sky not appear filled with a uniform blaze of light. As Newcomb showed, such a universal blaze could exist only if the stars were distributed in space so that every region of great but finite extent was occupied, on the average, by at least one star. There is a conceivable arrangement of the stars which would admit of their being of unlimited number while yet not filling the sky with a blaze of light. Such an arrangement, however, is not believed to exist in reality, so we are left with the dilemma as you state it, viz: either the starry universe is limited or the light of the most distant stars is absorbed before it reaches us.

But it happens that quite recently, as Harlow Shapely has shown, positive evidence has been accumulated that there is no extinction of light in space. That being the case, we must conclude that the number of stars in existence is, though enormous, yet limited—some ten thousand millions perhaps, in our sidereal system, which is bounded by the Milky Way, and equally immense numbers included in some of the outlying systems now known as island universes.

Then the Einsteinians have theoretical reasons for believing the universe is limited, though embracing almost inconceivable immensity of space.

As to theories of the birth of planets, it can hardly be said, I think, that a general consensus of opinion exists among astronomers, at least not in a settled sense. No doubt, the theory that Jeans advocates and which is substantially the planetesimal theory of Chamberlin and Moulton, at present possesses more advocates than any other. But this is a situation liable to change at any time, not by the discovery of any positive concrete evidence on the subject, for that could hardly happen—we have no laboratories big enough, and resistent enough, to experiment with solar system making—but by the invention of some new theory opening a new trail for the mathematical physicists. But sometimes, judging by the way it comes out, such a trail might be suspected of having been laid by beaters with an unseed bag.

There has been quite a little war over the credits due in the matter of the invention of the planetesimal theory and its congeners; for cosmogonists are not free of human weaknesses concerning publicity, and theories are as subject to the law of meum et tuum as stocks and bonds or diamonds.

It seems almost a pity that the captivating Laplace hypothesis, as it had been worked out toward the end of the last century, was destined after all its beautiful concordances with the apparent facts of the solar system, to go down before the merciless law of the conservation of the moment of momentum. There are those who hope that some kind of cosmological surgery may yet save it.

As to our little family of planets being a "freak in the universe," I should think twice at least before accepting any such conclusion. Possibly that great 200-inch telescope, to be still greater successor that is sure to follow it, will show a world or two among the stars. So take the conceit out of overstuffed humans.
